HARDING URGES SHIP SUBSIDY TO SAVE U. S.

Washington, Nov. 21.—The administration Merchant Marine bill was formally reported out by the House Merchant Marine Committee today, without a record vote.

The Associated Press.

Washington, Nov. 21.—Enactment of the administration merchant marine bill was urged upon Congress today by President Harding as necessary to relieve the government of present "staggering losses" in operation of the war built merchant fleet, and to establish a program of assured shipping to serve the nation in war and give a guaranty of commercial independence in time of peace.

Personally addressing a joint session of the House and Senate, the executive declared an actual monetary saving to the government would result from the proposed law.

He challenged every insinuation of

Text of President Harding's Address

Washington, Nov. 21.—President's Harding's address to Congress, delivered today, follows:

Members of the Congress:

Late last February, I reported to you relative to the American merchant marine and recommended legislation which the executive branch of the government deemed essential to promote our merchant marine and with it our national welfare.

Other problems were pressing and other questions pending, and for one reason or another, which need not be recited, the suggested legislation has not progressed beyond a favorable recommendation by the House committee.

The committee has given the question a full and painstaking inquiry and study, and I hope that

FIGHT LIGHT CO'S SERVICE CHARGES

A petition was presented today to Mayor Haines of Medford urging him to recommend appropriation of 5,000 to be expended under the direction of the city solicitor for preparation and presentation of evidence to the Department of Public Utilities against the "service" charge imposed by Malden and Melrose Gas Light Company and Malden Electric Light Company.

The committee that signed the petition alleges that 15,143 customers of the gas company have had their bills increased, in some cases as much as 115 per cent., while 13,151 customers of the electric light company face increases ranging in some instances to 27 per cent. They estimate the service charge will mean $35,000 a year in Medford alone.

The signers are: Charles A. Coughlin, a candidate for alderman, John J. Mulkerin, Anthony F. R. Nevaline, Percival E. Ritchie, Francis Quinn, Michael De Stesio and Fred J. Hallenbrook.

MOTOR THEFTS LAID TO MAN ON PAROLE

Benjamin L. Terrell of Montreal, Can., was before Judge Ralph W. Reeve in the Lynn District Court today, charged with the larceny of an automobile by giving a bad check for $1,300. He waived examination and was held in $5,000 bonds for the grand jury.

According to the Lynn police, Terrell is wanted in Boston, Beverly, Salem, Winthrop and Chelsea, as well as by New Hampshire police.

The police claim that Terrell, while on parole from the State prison in Concord, N. H., was guilty of the thefts of over $10,000 worth of automobiles, furs and silks, and also left a trail of bad checks in Massachusetts and New Hampshire.

SO. BOSTON COP SUSPENDED ON GIRLS' CHARGES

Patrolman Timothy J. Murphy of the City Point police station was arrested today on charges of attacking young girls.

According to the story told to the police by the mothers of the children the attacks on the girls have been going on since last September. When the parents complained to the police, Captain Rooney and Sergeant Wheeler investigated and the arrest of Murphy followed. He was suspended from the department.

Murphy is twenty-nine years old and resides at No. 351 West Third street in South Boston. He is married, but was separated from his wife last March.

He was appointed to the police department, Nov. 18, 1919, and was at Station 4 and Station 9 before being assigned to Station 12, where he patrolled the Flood square district on the night shift.

ANOTHER SHOE FIRM JOINS LYNN EXODUS

Another firm today announced its intention of joining the exodus of Lynn shoe manufacturers to localities said to be more favorable by reason of lower rents and better labor conditions. The H. K. Gardner Company, with factory at No. 180 Washington street, Lynn, and employing 250 hands, today said they would move to Pittsfield, where they had been offered free water and a tax-free site. They declared at the same time that the Lynn workers do not want to work. Recently the Rialto Shoe Company moved to South Boston, and three other of the largest shoe factories will follow the first of next year.

WITNESS DESCRIBES LAND DEAL

Testifies at Craft Probe Many Believed Money Had to Be Used

Testimony to the effect that members of the congregation Beth Israel believed that 'everyone in City Hall from the Big Chief down" had to be paid in order that the city purchase the property and charges by Attorney Daniel T. O'Connell that the Finance Commission "is acting outrageously and without fair play," featured the investigation of the Baldwin place land deal today.

The hearing is being held to investigate charges that Councilmen William J. Walsh and David Brickley were paid for their votes in favor of buying the property.

Bernard S. Gordon, a member of the congregation, testified today that it was the belief that "everyone in City Hall was to receive some of the purchase money." He told of a meeting at the office of Isaac Heller, president of the congregation, attended by about twelve of the members.

"VERY EXPENSIVE."

"Everybody wanted to know why so much money was necessary to have the city buy the property," he testified. "Heller told us it was a very expensive matter and that everybody would have to be paid."

He was questioned by Attorney John C. L. Dowling, representing the Finance Commission:

Q.—Who did he mean by everybody? A.—The people at City Hall.

Q.—Did he give you any names? A.—No.

Q.—Did he indicate how the money was to be expended? A.—He said that city councillors were to get the money.

Q.—Did he state the number to be paid? A.—He said all of them.

Q.—All nine of them? A.—Yes if that is the number.

Q.—When he said that the City Councilmen were to be paid did he connect the $4,000 with that? A.—Yes.

Q.—Did he say by what means they were to receive it? A.—He said

COLLAPSES WHILE TELLING OF ATTACK

While telling of an assault upon him by his son-in-law in East Boston court before Judge F. J. Lane today, William E. Brown, seventy-seven years old, a retired Boston police officer, collapsed and the hearing was suspended until he was revived.

Brown, in his palmy days was the strongest man on the police force and a noted wrestler and boxer. Last week he and his son-in-law, Robert E. Bemis, with whom he resides, got into an argument over some clothing owned by Mr. Brown's late wife. Bemis is alleged to have choked and punched his father-in-law. He was fined $25 when Brown recovered and finished his story.

URGES POLICE RULE IN COAL DELIVERY

Everett Morse, city fuel administrator, has suggested to Mayor Curley that the police be ordered to enforce regulations concerning delivery of coal, as is done by the police of New York.

The Mayor wrote in reply to Mr. Morse:

"I am quite sure the police commissioner will co-operate most heartily in the enforcement of the regulations, and I should be most pleased to intercede with him, but for the fact that he is appointed by the Governor, and unlike such officials in other cities in this Commonwealth is not appointed by the Mayor of the city which he serves."

USE SLAIN MAN'S DOG IN MURDER TRIAL

Springfield, Nov. 21.—The trial of Carl E. Belanger, accused of third degree murder in connection with the robbery and killing of Wallace L. Weber, a storekeeper, on the night of Sept. 17, 1921, opened here today in the Criminal Superior Court.

District Attorney Charles H. Wright charged Belanger with having planned the robbery. The prosecution will summon Albert J. Duhaime, who is serving life as an accomplice, in the Hampden jail, as a witness.

The jury visited the scene of the crime. They followed Weber's faithful spaniel around the premises. The Commonwealth will use the dog in the case.

The killing of Weber followed a gun duel. Bandits entered his store and demanded his money. He whipped out a pistol and fired. The robbers fired back and Weber was killed.

LLOYD SENT AWAY FROM PRISON DOOR

Chicago, Nov. 21.—William Bross Lloyd, millionaire Communist Labor Party leader, convicted with nineteen other men of violation of the Illinois sedition law, was reported today to have appeared at the Joliet Penitentiary prepared to begin his term of one to five years. He was refused admittance, according to information received here, because the warden had received no commitment papers for him.

RAAB GIRL WITH LOUD AT RANGE

Heard Him Say, "I Bumped One, I'll Hit This One!" at Shooting Gallery

Mrs. Mary O'Leary Raab today swore she heard Clarence W. Lond, acquitted of the murder of Patrolman James A. Preston, say to Mrs. Kate Adams Dow, "we bumped one off, but now watch me hit this bull's eye."

Mrs. Raab was testifying in Malden District Court as to what took place at a Nahant shooting gallery last September, when she knew Lond as "Mr. Goodwin, movie director."

The witness was called in rebuttal at the trial of her charges of assault by Mrs. Dow, Mr. and Mrs. John A. McIntyre and George H. Robinson because she "knew too much about the Preston murder."

"BUMPED OFF ONE."

"I went to Nahant with Mr. and Mrs. Dow and Mr. Lond, whom I then knew as Mr Goodwin, a motion picture man," she said.

Attorney William Powers, Jr., asked:

Q.—When did you go to Nahant?

NEIGHBOR TESTIFIES RAAB GIRL DANCED IN NEGLIGEE IN YARD

A.—On September 1 last, on my second meeting with the Dows, whom I first met, August 15, at Suntaug Inn.

Q.—What automobile did you go in? A.—In Mayor Adams' car.

Q.—What kind of car was it? A.—A roadster, and we all four sat in one seat. When we got to Nahant we visited a shooting gallery. Mr. Dow drove the car. We all ate popcorn, then we started shooting. I tried, but I couldn't shoot very well. Mr. Loud shot very well and said to Mrs. Dow: "Well, Kitty, we bumped one off and now watch me hit this bullseye."

Q.—Did you hear Mrs. Dow testify you have only been to her house three or four times? A.—Yes.

SERVED 40 DRINKS.

Q.—How many times did you go to her home? A.—About fourteen times all told.

Q.—On invitation? A.—I was always invited by either Mr. or Mrs. Dow.

Q.—Did you talk with Mrs. Dow over the telephone? A.—Many times; sometimes we would talk together for over an hour.

Q.—When you said that forty drinks were served at the Dow party what did you mean? A.—I meant that not forty drinks were taken by each guest, but that forty drinks were served all told.

Q.—Who served the drinks? A.—Mr. Dow. He came in with a tray and cocktail mixed, and said, "Who is the best little mixer in Melrose?" The crowd said, "You are," and all laughed.

Counsel for the principals reached agreement at 2 o'clock and both sides rested their case. Mrs. Raab was in the midst of rebuttal.

Attorney Allen, opening the argument, referred to Mrs. Raab as a "spitfire" who had been an "odd" member of party who came uninvited," and declared "her charges have not been substantiated by any evidence to date.

Albert G. Fisher, principal of Arlington Heights School, shared honors with Mrs. Raab as star witness of the day, although her mother, Mrs. Norah O'Leary, created a stir when she said, "Mayor Adams' testimony was a falsehood."

Mr. Fisher, referring to Mrs. Raab, testified:

"I saw her come out almost naked and walk to the back yard and saw her dance and gyrate and shout and screech and laugh."

Mrs. Raab blushed and her eyes flashed. Her attorney, Robert E. Harding, interrupted. He asked:

"What was she doing?"

Professor Fisher—She was hanging up clothes.

Q.—What did she have on? A.—Only a loose dress that was not buttoned up the front.

Q.—Where were you? A.—In my backyard.

Q.—Did you turn your head? A.—No.

Q.—How long did you look? A.—Several minutes.

Q.—What for? A.—I wanted to see if she was tight.

KEPT NOTES ON MARY.

Q.—Do you think it right for a school principal to go snooping around looking at naked women or partly dressed women?

The witness made no answer to this question.

Professor Fisher previously admitted that he lived next door to Mary Raab and that he had kept notes on the movements of Mary and her parents since 1915.

The reason was that once O'Leary started suit against Fisher for $5,000 on grounds of slander.

Mrs. Mary Weller, a neighbor, was questioned about Mrs. Raab's reputation for telling the truth, only to admit, in cross-examination, that all she knew of the girl was hearsay.

During a clash over this witness, Attorney Claudo Allen of the defence said: "The complainants have pretty near come into turning this into a murder trial at times. They have not painted a true picture of the defendants, so we feel that we are entitled to considerable latitude."

Attorney Harding retorted: "I would like to remind the defence that whatever painting has been done has been done by themselves.

Attorney Allen—I will paint our picture; you paint yours.

Attorney Harding—You paint yours and we will smear it.

COUNSEL IN CLASH.

Attorney Albert E. Hughes opened the examination of Mr. Fisher by asking: "What was Mrs. Raab's reputation for truth and veracity? A.—Very, very bad.

Attorney Harding objected to the "venom and animus of the witness' replies."

Attorney Hughes—Did you ever see Mrs. Raab under the influence of liquor?

Judge Stover—I do not see how that can affect Mrs. Raab's reputation for veracity.

Attorney Claude Allen—Mrs. Raab has testified she never used liquor and that the first time she ever drank was at the Dow home. This witness will testify she has used liquor repeatedly.

Witness replied he had seen her "under the influence" and described how she had come out "half naked several times."

Attorney Hughes — Did you ever see Mrs. Raab and her parents in any trouble? A.—Occasional fights.

Q.—Did you ever see her father do anything to her? A.—No, he couldn't. (Laughter.)

Q.—What did you see her do? A.—Fight and scratch and screech.

Q.—Where was all this? A.—In the O'Leary home.

Q.—You refer to Mrs. Raab fighting with her parents. Were blows struck by the girl? A.—Yes.

Q.—Who did she strike? A.—Her father and mother. She made a mess of him.

Witness Fisher admitted he had been sued for $5,000 for slander by Mr. O'Leary and that he had "intended suing all of them" because of "drunkenness and brawling."

FASTING SISTER COLLAPSES AT JAIL GATE

International News Service.

Dublin, Nov. 21.—In a downpour of rain which drenched her to the skin, Annie MacSwiney today entered into the fifth day of her hunger strike at the gates of Mountjoy Prison to protest against the arrest of her sister, Mary.

Annie MacSwiney collapsed today. Broken by starvation and exposure she fell in her tracks. Friends made a bed for her near the jail gate and covered her with rugs. She had complained of violent pains in her head, which, she said, were getting worse.

Inside the prison, Mary MacSwiney, weak from seventeen days of self-imposed starvation, tossed on a hospital cot.

A little group of women remained with Annie MacSwiney during the night, bathing her hands and face with hot water and praying at her side.

Groups gathered at times to look upon this strange and pathetic scene. Some wept as they saw the haggard woman hunger striker totter from her chair or fling herself down upon her muddied mattress for a brief respite from her vigil.

A sixteen-year old girl was killed while attending a meeting of protest against the continued detention of Mary MacSwiney. Public bodies are demanding an inquiry, claiming Free State troops fired on the meeting.

A number of women in other parts of Ireland, moved by sympathy or loyalty to the Republican cause, have appealed to the Free State government which has shown no disposition to modify its policy towards the Republicans. Officials at Mountjoy prison said that Mary's condition was "unchanged."

Ulster Deports 40 Protestants

Belfast, Nov. 21.—The Ulster authorities have deported from Belfast about forty Protestants whose presence they thought detrimental to the city's peace. Most of those deported lived in the York street area, the others being from Ballymacarret, an eastern suburb of Belfast.

Childers in Court on Habeas Corpus

In Hospital

MRS. BABE RUTH.

Once again mystery envelopes Mrs. George Herman Ruth. The wife of the Big Bam is in St. Vincent's Hospital, New York, and no one there will give out any information as to the nature of her illness, for Mrs. Ruth has given orders for secrecy. As she entered the hospital she told the nurse that nothing should be said pertaining to her presence there or her illness.

St. Vincent's is the same hospital where her daughter, Dorothy, is supposed to have been born in June, 1921. Mrs. Ruth's illness recalls the gossip when it was discovered the King of Swat and his wife had kept secret the existence of their baby daughter. She and her big dad are awaiting Mrs. Ruth's recovery at the Ruth farm in Sudbury.

Constantinople, Nov. 21 (By International News Service).—Amidst great pomp and ceremony the inauguration of Crown Prince Abdul Medjid Effendi as Caliph took place today in the historic Dalma Dagtche Palace.

Lausanne, Nov. 21 (By the Associated Press).—Richard Washburn Child, American Ambassador to Italy, explained at the plenary session of the Near East peace conference to day the position of the observers for the United States.

America, he stated, was much interested in the Near Eastern settlement, and its observers would attend the meeting and join in the discussions, but were not authorized to be members of the commissions, to sign reports, or to vote on the decisions.

Ambassador Child and his co-observer at the conference, Joseph C. Drew, American minister to Switzerland conferred today with Premier Poincare of France.

Ambassador Child frankly outlined the American position on various problems. It is understood this outline set forth the American desire that the extra territorial privileges of foreigners in Turkey by retained in so far, at least, as their life and property rights might be involved in trials under the Turkish law, although the impression is that modification of existing taxation exemptions would not be opposed.

The American representatives, it is learned, have not confined their preliminary conference to France, but in a desire to learn the viewpoints of the other leading nations in a general spirit of understanding they conferred also with Lord Curzon, the British Foreign Secretary, and Premier Mussolini of Italy.

Clemenceau Sees Some Editors
They See Him, and Hear Him
What They Saw
What He Saw

—By Arthur Brisbane—

Copyright, 1922, by Star Company

RALPH PULITZER invited about fifty editors to meet Clemenceau, vice versa, at luncheon in New York yesterday.

One hundred million Americans ought to see Clemenceau and hear him. They would be the better for it. But most of them can't see him, so here are some words about him that will reach twenty millions at least.

HE CAME late, as announced in advance—he does not eat luncheon. You saw the representative of the nation that won the war, and France's best fighting man. Clemenceau, not Foch, is that man. Fighting is done with the brain and heart more than with armies.

He is a short man, with broad shoulders and a heavy head. Millions of thoughts have gone through that brain, and each has left its noble mark on the old face, bronzed, worn, but full of combat and courage.

His eyes, dark gray, light up like the eyes of a child, in conversation. At heart he has not grown old. But at rest the eyes are sad beyond expression. One love, France, fills that man's heart. He tells it all.

"Athens did more for liberty than any of antiquity. Go there, what trace shall you see of all that? Shall France pass in the same way?"

Not if the last strength and devotion in an old man can revive in a great republic the sympathy and support promised so freely a short time ago.

"WHAT DID the king look like, what did he wear?" Carlyle indignantly asks of the old monk that saw King John in his monastery and never described him.

You shall hear what the king of Frenchmen, the king among fighting patriots looks like, in his age. This writer saw him first in 1878, 44 years ago. Then the French Republic was young; Gambetta was in his fighting prime. Thiers, McMahon, De Freycinet were the names you heard. All gone now but Clemenceau, then a young man, black-haired, ardent, the war of 1870 and the defeat of France uppermost in his mind.

Now his thin, white hair, drooping mustache and long thick eyebrows grow rough, like gray moss on an old tree. Half a century has passed, and in his thoughts of the war just won by France, and on how to preserve that victory.

HE DRESSES in plain black, his shirt has a light blue stripe, stiff high collar and little black bow tie, struggling toward the left ear. On his hands are mouse-colored gloves, not taken off as he sits at table.

His ears are small, sign of a combative nature; his arms remarkably short, sign of high civilization. In chimpansees and some savages, the hands reach below the knees.

His head is wide, the brachy-

GOV. COX TAKES HAND IN GORDON PROBE

UNCLE OF DOROTHY TO BARE SECRETS

Private Life of Jardines Will Be Revealed at Resumption of Hearing

The first thing Gov. Cox did when he returned today from Cuba was to inquire into the case of Dorothy Gordon.

He sent for Dr. George M. Kline, State commissioner of mental diseases. Later the Governor said:

"I was anxious to learn whether the commitment of Miss Gordon was legal and regular and whether she was receiving proper care at McLean Hospital.

"Dr. Kline gave me definite assurance that the commitment was legal and that the girl is being properly cared for.

"Dr. Kline preferred not to discuss the present mental condition of Miss Gordon, because the case was pending in the court."

To Bare Private Life of Jardines

When the Dorothy Gordon hearing is resumed in the Suffolk County Superior Court next Friday before Auditor G. A. A. Pevey, testimony even more unusual than any that has been given thus far will be offered.

The private life of William F. Jardine and his wife, Lena, will be described by John D. Gardiner, Dorothy's uncle, who is fighting to oust Jardine as guardian of the $400,000 heiress confined in the McLean Insane Asylum. Gardiner will bring on a small army of witnesses, who will subject the character of Jardine and his wife to a bitter attack.

WITNESS QUESTIONED.

"The question of whether or not Dorothy Gordon is now sane or insane will be put aside for the present," announced Attorney John L. Sheehan, counsel for Gardiner, "and the fitness of Jardine and his wife as guardians over Dorothy will be taken up. We maintain that Jardine is not a proper man in any sense of the word to be in charge of Dorothy Gordon and her estate.

"We maintain that Lena Jardine is not a fit person to have partial care over Dorothy Gordon. We have scores of witnesses who will be called to the stand to tell of the home life of the Jardines.

IN FIGHT TO WIN.

MRS. GRAFTON W. MINOT

WIFE CHARGES DESERTION BY G. W. MINOT

Mrs. Constance Gardner Minot, granddaughter of U. S. Senator Henry Cabot Lodge and a member of one of the most prominent families in New England, has filed suit for divorce in Salem Court against Grafton W. Minot.

In her suit she accuses her husband of desertion three years ago, and asks the custody of their two children. She is now living at Pride's Crossing. The children are with her. Mr. Minot is living in New York.

Mrs. Minot is a daughter of the late Congressman Augustus Peabody Gardner. She married Mr. Minot on July 24, 1915, in the Episcopal Church at Ipswich.

Mr. Minot was at that time an attache of the American Embassy in Berlin. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. J. Grafton Minot of Boston, and graduated from Harvard in 1914.

The romance that led to their wedding blossomed first overseas. Both were in England in 1914, when the European war broke out. Mrs. Minot, then Miss Gardner, stayed in London helping her father assist stranded Americans back to this country, while Mr. Minot was performing similar services in Berlin. The two saw each other frequently, and it was not long after her return to this country that Mr. Minot followed her and married her.

HAND-SHAKING IS BARRED TO CLEMENCEAU

The "Tiger of France" will be spared the ordeal of the great American handshake during his reception in Boston Thursday and Friday.

The welcome to Clemenceau will be warm, but he is eighty-one years old and has his physical limitations.

Governor Cox mentioned today, in speaking of plans for State greeting to the French statesman, that at the brief reception in the Hall of Flags at the State House there will be no opportunity for those attending to shake the visitor's hand. The "Tiger's" own physician has recommended that the hand-gripping be eliminated from these public programs.

Tonight in New York Clemenceau will make his first public address since arriving Saturday. The theme will be the reconstruction of France.

Tomorrow he will complete his Boston speech on which he has already been working, to be delivered in Tremont Temple Friday afternoon.

He will leave New York Thursday on a special train due at the South Station at 2:30 p. m. Lieut.-Gov. Fuller will head a committee of welcome. The "Tiger" will be escorted along Federal, Milk, Congress, State Washington, School and Beacon streets to the State House. There will be a brief reception at City Hall and the State House. Then Clemenceau will proceed along Beacon, Arlington streets, Commonwealth avenue and Dartmouth street to Copley square.

A greeting will be sung by 2,000 school children on the steps of the Public Library.

In Boston Clemenceau will be the guest of Francis L. Higginson of No. 316 Commonwealth avenue.

The staff of Major-General Clarence R. Edwards, many of whom knew Clemenceau in France, say they were left out in the distribution of tickets for the Friday address. Those in charge say it was impossible to give tickets to all who desired them, but that there was no intention to slight the army men at South Boston.

DRIVER OF DEATH CAR IS HELD

Joseph C. McNally of No. 5 Letterfine terrace, Dorchester, driver of the automobile which crashed through a fence on Washington street, at the Dedham and Boston line, resulting in the death of Joseph T. Dizzel, was arraigned in Dedham District Court today on charges of drunkenness and operating a car while under influence of liquor.

Another occupant of the car, William H. Bowman, of No. 113 Hancock street, Dorchester, was arraigned on a charge of drunkenness. McNally was held in $600 and Bowman in $100 bail for a hearing Thursday.

Mrs. Hall's Friends Ask Hearing

Somerville, N. J., Nov. 21 (By International News Service). A demand "in the name of justice" that Mrs. Edward Wheeler Hall, widow of the slain rector of St. John's Episcopal Church, who with his choir singer, Mrs. Eleanor R. Mills, were murdered on September 14, be given an opportunity to testify before the Somerset Grand Jury, was made today in the form of a petition signed by a long list of friends and relatives of the woman.

New and interesting light was shed on the so-called eyewitness story of Mrs. Jane Gibson, the "pig woman," by George Sipel, a farmer and cattle dealer, about thirty, living in Middlebush, eight miles from New Brunswick.

Mr. Sipel told a reporter that a week ago Sunday Mrs. Gibson asked him to come to her place and settle a dispute over the ownership of some pigs between her and Mrs. Nellie Lo Russell, the negress who has challenged her eye-witness story.

"I told Mrs. Gibson," he said, "that on the night of the murder I drove a friend into New Brunswick and went home along Easton avenue. That was about eleven o'clock. I know because I left home about ten and had to go very slowly because my lights were out and the road was bad.

"At Landing lane, near the Parker Memorial Home and not far from De Bruney's lane, a car was standing—a Ford delivery truck. I slowed down and blew my horn, intending to pass, but the truck started up and drove into the lane.

"Last Saturday Mrs. Gibson came over again and asked me about the time I passed De Bruney's lane. Then she asked me to agree to something to which I couldn't agree. Mrs. Gibson misjudged the man she was talking to. That is plain. She thought I was a different sort of a man, and she made a mistake."

HELD IN FAKE GEM ROBBERY

Louis H. Gluck, charged with staging a fake robbery for the purpose of concealing $25,000 assets from the trustee in bankruptcy of the United Jewelry Company of this city, was held for the Grand Jury today by United States Commissioner Hayes. He furnished $1,000 bail.

At previous hearings Gldck, who was formerly a partner in the jewelry company, told of being held up between Springfield and Hartford on the night of July 13, 1921, by men who took diamonds and jewelry valued at $15,000.

WARD'S VITOVIM BREAD

As Compared with Other White Breads

Some Scientific Facts About Vitovim Bread

VITOVIM BREAD contains proteins of superior food value for growth and strength.

—liberal amounts of vitamins A and B.

It is rich in the food elements needed by the mother and growing child.

It supplies abundant energy for young and old at low cost.

Measured by the elements necessary in the food for everybody, Vitovim is the most nutritious bread ever baked and one of the most perfect single foods ever produced.

THE amazing superiority in food-value of VITOVIM BREAD is strikingly demonstrated by the representative growth-chart shown above. This chart is an accurate record of one of the hundreds of animal feeding experiments made in our own laboratories and the laboratories of leading Universities of the United States during the last eighteen months to determine the relative food-value of VITOVIM BREAD as compared with the best known white breads.

How to Read the Chart

——Solid black line No. 1 shows how one of the experimental animals after being weaned from the mother thrived and grew steadily, gaining in weight and maintaining perfect health and vigor on an exclusive diet of WARD'S VITOVIM BREAD and water.

- - - Broken line No. 2 shows an average of how six animals of the same age and weight, failed to grow on a diet of three of the most popular white breads sold in this territory.

——Solid line No. 3 shows how these six animals immediately resumed their normal rate of growth as soon as their diet was changed to WARD'S VITOVIM BREAD.

Study this chart carefully. Think of it in terms of your children and other members of your family. Then ask yourself whether it isn't worth while to make WARD'S VITOVIM BREAD the basis of every meal in your home. Here at last is a real "staff of life."

It costs a little more—but when considered in the light of its nutritional value, its worth is incalculable—especially when applied to the health and welfare of expectant and nursing mothers and growing children.

MAYOR CURLEY SENDS CHECK TO CHRISTMAS BASKET FUND

WARMLY PRAISES WORK

Every Cent Contributed Goes to Feed Those Who Otherwise Would Go Hungry

In glowing words Mayor James M. Curley has endorsed the Boston American Christmas Basket Fund, which opened yesterday for the ninth season, with a contribution of $1,000 from this newspaper. In addition to endorsing the fund, Boston's live-wire Mayor enclosed a check for $100 "on behalf of the Curley family."

Mayor Curley has personal knowledge of the wonderful work the Christmas Fund of the Boston American has done during the past eight years.

The Mayor's letter follows:

"Editor, Boston American:

"The Christmas season, the kindliest and tenderest of the year, will soon be with us, with all its beautiful traditions of mercy and good will, to remind us of the gratitude we owe for the blessings received, and to remember that the best and noblest expression of that gratitude lies in the remembrance of those who have been less fortunate in life and our duty to hold out a helping hand to them, that something of the spirit of Christmas may be brought into their homes.

"It has been said truly that one-half of the world does not know how the other half lives; but we do know that there are many who have heavy loads to carry and the practical Christianity that lightens the burden of a less fortunate one not only brings happiness to some home, but adds to the peace of the community.

"This has been a hard year for many; conditions have made for unemployment with much scrimping and suffering; they look forward to Christmas with mixed feelings of joy and doubt; and they listen to the children who have come to regard Christmas as the day of gifts and bounties; and not the least of this sadness lies in the disappointment of the little ones, stout believers in the reality and generosity of Santa Claus. Here is where we all have an opportunity to play Santa Claus, by contributing from our own good fortune something to make homes brighter and children happier on that great day when He was born in Nazareth who loved the little ones of the earth and said: Suffe little children to come unto Me.

"The Boston America s never forgets Christmas and the duty we owe to the poor, the fatherless, those striving bravely but unsuccessfully to keep the wolf from the door. It has knowledge of where the poor and needy are, and how to bring them the light of Christmas without offence to their pride: and every year it is enabled to do some splendid work by acting as the go-between of the generous and the poor. It is a work worthy of approbation and entitled to the support and co-operation of the citizens of Boston.

"I am heartily in favor of this beautiful enterprise of the Boston American, and I sincerely trust that it will receive the hearty aid of every man and woman of this city. To hold out the helping hand to the unfortunate at this kindly season is more than charity and generosity—it is duty and religion.

"On behalf of the Curley family I beg to enclose check for $100 as contribution to the Boston American Christmas Basket Fund."

MAYOR AND HIS CHECK.

A letter from Mayor James M. Curley, warmly commending the good work done by the Boston American Christmas Basket Fund, is accompanied by a check for $100. Every cent goes to buy food on Christmas for those who otherwise would go hungry; as is the case with every penny collected. Send in your contribution today.

SEEKS TO SURPASS.

The Christmas Fund editor hopes to better last year's effort when 44,000 needy persons were fed in Greater Boston. A total of 8,500 families received food in their homes from this fund last Christmas and it is the desire of this newspaper to do as well or better this season. The only limit to the number of needy families who will receive food this season will be the amount of money contributed. As in former years it is probable that hundreds of families will remain without a good dinner at Christmas unless a substantial sum is raised to feed them. Every year hundreds of applications for food have remained unfilled because of lack of funds.

Many families in Greater Boston are hard hit this year on account of unemployment. Hundreds of persons have been unable to secure sufficient work to pay ordinary household bills. Families that have never previously known want are now in need, their savings having been used during the period of unemployment of breadwinners. It does not take long for the savings of a working man or woman to disappear in these days of high rents and prices of necessities of life.

It would be difficult for a person desiring to help the needy at Christmas to find a better medium through which to act than the American's Christmas Basket Fund, as we spend 100 cents on every dollar we collect solely for food and inquire into all cases so that only the needy may receive the food. The Boston American pays all expenses connected with the work of the fund out of its own pocket.

If the prospective contributer could take a trip with one of the good men or women who are aiding the Christmas Fund editor by inquiring into the merits of cases he would not hesitate to make a contribution.

DISTRESSING CASES.

Many distressing cases of poverty were found by the Christmas Fund workers. In one Roxbury home they found two old ladies, one of whom was blind, who had no fire in the house. The only food in the pantry was part of a loaf of bread. The Christmas Fund worker found bits of paper stuffed in the keyholes of the door to keep out the cold. These aged sisters were aided by the American's fund.

In another Roxbury tenement a Christmas Fund worker found a family of eight. The husband was earning only $9 a week. One of the children was suffering from tuberculosis when the good women representing the Christmas Fund entered their little four-room tenement. He found an appalling condition of affairs. The furniture consisted of a small kitchen stove, a kitchen table, two beds, one of which was broken, a broken ice chest and three bits of wornout carpet. Despite this extreme poverty the mother of these six children had not given up hope and her tenement was immaculately clean.

Soap boxes served as chairs. The chairs had previously been sold to get food. Dinner that day for the entire family consisted of boiled Indian meal, which was cooking when the Christmas Fund Worker entered the tenement.

The American hopes that no child in Greater Boston will be hungry on Christmas Day. It hopes that every needy boy and girl will have a substantial dinner on this great holiday. Contributions should be made payable ONLY to Boston American Christmas Basket Fund, No. 90 Summer street, Boston (9), Mass. Obey that impulse by sending that contribution in NOW.

The contributions received to date are as follows:

M. J. JORDAN TO LECTURE ON IRISH

Michael J. Jordan, Esq., will deliver a lecture to Sherwood Court, Massachusetts Catholic Order of Foresters, on Friday evening, November 24, 1923, at 8 o'clock, in Rose Hall, Worcester street.

The subject of the lecture is "The Civilization of Ancient Ireland." It is a subject of which very little is known by most people of Irish descent. But there is no question of so much importance to people who are interested in the history of Ireland as that relating to the people from whom they sprang.

The lecture describes the ancient Irish, their method of life, their laws, their family relations, their arts and science, their outlook upon the world generally.

It will deal also with a phase of Irish life which is unexcelled in the history of the world—that is the great schools of ancient Ireland.

FEARING RABIES, SALEM ORDERS SERUM SUPPLY

Officials of the Salem Hospital have ordered a special consignment of rabies serum from New York to combat a possible epidemic of hydrophobia. Last Sunday morning a rabid bull pup raced madly about the Salem streets biting a score of people. The dog was shot but he was seen to bite another dog, a collie, and the police fearing that the collie is spreading the disease, have instituted a hunt for him.

The collie was seen to enter the St. anes Church on Federal street last Sunday. He hasn't been seen since.

Isabelle Schowics, ten-year old victim of hydrophobia, caused from a dog's bite, has been taken to the Salem Hospital. She will be the first at the hospital to be treated with rabies serum.

HOW TO DARKEN GRAY HAIR

A Cincinnati Barber Tells How to Use Barbo Compound.

A well known resident of Cincinnati, Ohio, who has been a barber for more than forty years, recently made the following statement:

"Anyone can prepare a simple mixture at home, at very little cost, that will darken gray hair, and make it soft and glossy. To a half-pint of water add 1 ounce bay Rum, a small box of Barbo Compound and ¼ ounce glycerine. These ingredients can be bought at any drug store at very little cost. Apply to the hair twice a week until the desired shade is obtained. This will make a gray-haired person look twenty years younger. It is easy to use, does not color the most delicate scalp, is not sticky or greasy and does not rub off."

The Story of the Twelve Toothbrushes

What a Bacteriologist Found on the Tooth Brushes of a Dozen Business Men

SOME time ago twelve business men, all thirty years or more of age, agreed to submit the tooth brushes they were then using to a bacteriological test.

The brushes were collected and sent to one of the leading bacteriologists of the country with the request that he examine them for pyorrhea germs. His startling report has just been received. It shows that thousands of pyorrhea germs were found on the bristles of ten of the tooth brushes examined.

Bear this in mind: the men whose tooth brushes were submitted were not picked as likely victims of pyorrhea. They were taken at random.

The report in full is too long for publication. We will simply quote from the letter which accompanied it:

Zonite Products Company, New York City

"Gentlemen: We enclose herewith our report on the cultures made from the twelve tooth brushes submitted to us for bacteriological examination. On ten of the twelve tooth brushes we found the bacteria which cause pyorrhea."

Now, what does the above letter prove? It proves that in the mouths of about eight out of ten Americans who are no longer in the bloom of youth, the deadly pyorrhea germs are at work, slowly reducing them to a toothless old age, filling their systems with pus and poison, and undermining their health.

What is Pyorrhea?

In answering this question we will quote only the accepted dental authorities of the world. Pyorrhea is a disease of the gums. It is caused by bacteria which lodge between the gums and the teeth or which are forced there by the tooth brush. It makes its first appearance, as a rule, at the age of about thirty. It is estimated that eighty per cent of all those who have passed this age are afflicted with the disease. Its earlier symptoms are bleeding and tenderness of the gums. Later the gums become sore and sensitive, and if pressed pus will exude at the base of the teeth. In the last stages the gums have receded until the teeth loosen and fall out.

It is now known that loss of teeth during adult life and toothless old age are almost invariably caused by pyorrhea. It is estimated that if pyorrhea is not checked, the man or woman afflicted by it will swallow eight gallons of pus during the course of the disease. This pus, as it is absorbed by the system, causes headaches, general debility and high blood pressure, followed by such complications as Bright's disease, heart trouble and rheumatism.

Pyorrhea Can Be Prevented

Pyorrhea can be prevented in one way and in one way only; by killing the germs which cause the disease before they are safely lodged between the gums and the teeth.

Until recently it was extremely difficult to do this. All antiseptics, which were powerful enough to kill the germs, were of a poisonous character. They could not be safely taken into the mouth in strong enough solution to be effective. The popular and so-called "mild antiseptics," which have a pleasant taste or slightly foaming action, have no more effect on pyorrhea than so much rain water. Zonite, the marvelous World War antiseptic, is not only absolutely non-poisonous, but under standard laboratory tests it is more than twice as powerful a germicide as carbolic acid. It destroys germs promptly and is the only form of antiseptic which can be used as a mouth wash in sufficient strength to destroy the pyorrhea germs.

What Zonite Will Do

Zonite will positively prevent pyorrhea. This statement is endorsed by leading bacteriologists of the country. The disease in its earlier stages has been entirely checked by it in a few days' time. If the disease is so far advanced that the germs have worked down toward the roots of the teeth beyond the reach of the antiseptic, dental treatment is absolutely necessary, after which Zonite will tend to prevent the return of the disease.

If the present generation of Americans will rinse the mouth night and morning with Zonite and water after brushing the teeth and disinfect the tooth brush by letting it stand for a few minutes in the same solution, this health destroying, disfiguring disease can be brought under control and we will be a healthier and happier people.

Now, then, what are you going to do about it? Are you going to continue using pleasant-tasting mouth-washes—antiseptics in name only—at the risk of becoming toothless and diseased—or will you take advantage of one of the greatest medical discoveries of all times and be protected by Zonite?

Notice to Dentists:

A 50 per cent solution of Zonite makes a Dakin's solution; no testing required. Because of its stability, Zonite will be found superior to Dakin's for use in cases of pyorrhea.

WOODHOUSE LONGED TO HAVE 'CUTIE PIE' 'CHEW HIS EYEBROW'

SENT HER 'WORLD FULL OF LOVE AND MILLION KISSES'

Burlington, Nov. 21.—C. Douglas Woodhouse's love messages to beautiful Dorrit Van Deusen Stevens Woodhouse proved an interesting feature of the evidence in the $1,000,000 alienation suit his wife is waging against her in-laws, Mr. and Mrs. Lorenzo Woodhouse.

C. Douglas' parents squirmed and the spectators smiled as Attorney Warren R. Austin read:

"Cutie Pie, dear, I wish I were with you now, darling, and you could chew my eyebrow."

Again, in another love note, C. Douglas wrote of how his ear, was "in need of a good biting."

As the bulky sheaf of impassioned messages were read Mrs. Dorrit blushed. This was especially true when the attorney came to one in which "your Doug" referred to his "Cutie Pie" as a "Dear Long Legged Bum."

"MILLIONS OF KISSES."

C. Douglas apparently took pride in thinking up unique terms of endearment and in these "pie" and other forms of pastry seem to have first call.

And C. Douglas was never stingy in his letters, for he casually gave "millions of kisses and cuddlings," "all the love in the world" and the like.

C. Douglas advised once: "In love there should be no place for distrust or suspicion. I would never take any other girl than you for an auto ride."

"WAR ENOUGH NOW."

Dorrit apparently had rebuked her impetuous letter - writing "sweetie" for, in another, was the line "There is war enough now without you and I having a war of our own."

It was after one of the most intimate letters that Attorney Austin asked Mrs. Woodhouse, "What did Charles Douglas Woodhouse become to you that day?"

Witness blushed and answered, "A husband."

The marriage was three months later.

BRIDE TAKES STAND.

Mrs. Woodhouse herself took the witness stand today and related in a few cryptic sentences her endeavor to win Douglas back after her had left her.

She told of her experiences in trying to locate her husband after he had entered the Canadian forests. She related that he left her with no money and that she was absolutely without means of support until she finally secured $100 per month from the millionaire's son.

According to previous testimony Dorrit was left in the dark as to her husband's whereabouts for several months previous to an encounter on the streets of Washington. She was obliged to borrow money by which she could pay her own ex penses until some remittances could be gained from her husband.

SOUGHT SETTLEMENT.

At one time she thought of taking up stenography. About that time, however, she thought that perhaps she could meet Douglas and arrange things in a manner satisfactory to both.

According to her testimony, she did her best to effect a reconciliation. She went to the extent of waiting anxiously night after night for the receipt of a telegram from him.

3 PINNED UNDER BLAZING AUTO IN LYNN

The police and fire departments of Lynn were called out today to extricate three men pinned under a burning motor-car, that had overturned on Lewis street in Lynn after a wild ride down Broad street, with two policemen in pursuit.

The three men gave their names as Hugh H. Kelley, No. 19 Cambridge street, Cambridge; John E. Vogel, May street, Beverly and Angus Beck, 102 Park avenue, Revere. Kelley was charged with driving while under the influence of liquor and in the Lynn District Court today his case was continued until November 24 by Judge Ralph W. Reeve.

According to Patrolman Edward J. Morrissey, he first spotted the motor car with the three men aboard zigzagging along Broad street, without lights. He stepped into the road to stop the machine, but Kelley drove straight at him, and the patrolman jumped for his life as the car whizzed by. Further down Broad street, Patrolman George Riban attempted to stop the machine, with he same result.

Then the car bumped into a tree on Lewis street, just off of Broad street. The machine overturned and caught fire, with the men pinned underneath. The fire department put out the fire and the police arrested the three men. Beck and Vogel were released.

Body of Strangled Baby Mailed to Undertaker

Albany, N. Y., Nov. 21.—Albany police today are trying to trace the person or persons who sent the body of a murdered baby by parcel post to an undertaker.

When A. B. Kiernan, undertaker, opened a package, he found the infant's body wrapped in old newspapers. A five-dollar bill was found inside the folds of the papers. It is believed this was intended to help pay for burial of the body. Dr. Morris Bellin, coroner's physician, said the baby had been strangled to death.

ONE SHOT KILLS IRISH SOLDIER AND GIRL

Cork, Ire., Nov. 21 (By International News Service).—A Free State soldier and a girl, Madge Daly, were killed by the same bullet while walking in Mulgrave road today.

Someone fired upon the soldier from ambush. The bullet pared through his body into that of the girl.

GAS ADVICE FOR ALL WHO WOULD LIVE AWHILE

Walter L. Badger, the State expert on explosives, today looked over the recent list of gas tank explosions and then handed a bit of solid advice to everyone who wants to stay on earth a while longer.

"Almost every day we are called upon to investigate some explosion where life or property, or both, are destroyed.

"There must be something the matter with the man who deliberately fills the tank of his auto with gasoline by the light of an oil lantern or lights a match to see how full the tank is.

"'No smoking' signs are constantly disregarded and it is not an uncommon sight to see a man light a cigar or cigarette at the rear of his car in a public garage while it is being filled with gasoline.

"An empty or partly-filled gasoline tank is more dangerous than one completely filled, for the reason that liquid gasoline cannot explode and will burn like a torch. The partly-filled tank contains a mixture of vapor and air that is at all times dangerous.

DISABLED RUM-LADEN SCHOONER TOWED IN

Halifax, N. S., Nov. 21.—With her auxiliary power out of commission, anchors lost, sails torn and foremast loose, the British three-masted schooner Doris was towed into this port by the Red Cross liner Rosalind from New York. The vessel was 129 days out from Penarth, Wales, from which port she cleared for Vera Cruz. Many of the crew showed signs of the lengthy voyage in flowing beards. Officers learned she had 1,500 cases of whiskey in her hold. A guard was placed on board while the vessel undergoes repairs.

Captain Sladen said that after clearing from Penarth he was ordered to proceed to St. Pierre, Miquelon, but boisterous weather prevented him from making the French island.

MAJESTIC STEAMS OUT OF HARBOR

The White Star liner Majestic was undocked at the South Boston drydock today. Twelve tugboats drew the liner out of the dock, while several hundred men controlled her with ten-inch hawsers. Then she steamed down the harbor. Sir Bertram Hayes, commander of the Majestic, praised the manner in which the world's biggest liner was handled here.

RHODE ISLAND WOMAN SPEAKS HER MIND

ABOUT DR. TRUE'S ELIXIR

About two years ago Mrs. Anna W. Sheehan of 20 School St., Pawtucket, R. I., wrote about her sick children and how they were restored to good health. She closed her letter as follows: "I am never without your Dr. True's Elixir in the house. I take it, my husband takes it, and when ever sick it is the most wonderful medicine I ever took. I will always recommend it, for I know it does the work and can prove it. Tell anybody to write to me and I will tell them."

Dr. True's Elixir is the True Family Laxative and Worm Expeller and has been helping to better health thousands of working people, children and mothers for the past 75 years. It is a renowned, reliable laxative, compounded to relieve constipation pleasantly and effectively; —unequalled for ridding children of worms. 40c—60c—$1.20.

DOCTORS RULE LIMBLESS BABY SHOULD BE ALLOWED TO LIVE

PARENTS VOW LOVE FOR CHILD

Willing to Let Providence Settle Fate of Legless, Armless Offspring

Chicago, Nov. 21.—"Let Providence alone, and not the methods of science, take our baby out of the world."

Unhesitatingly James C. Lebrasca today voiced the verdict of love for his two-day-old baby girl, born armless and legless, a victim of one of nature's grim moods.

Someone had told him that it were better off dead.

The child, with only the slightest suggestion of arms, will never be able to feed itself. It will be physically helpless the rest of its days. But it shall never want for love and care, its nineteen-year-old mother declared.

Excepting for the malformations, the child is physically and mentally sound, the three physicians attending it declared.

CHILD'S BRAIN NORMAL.

The Lebrasca case stands out in sharp contrast to the case of Baby Bellinger, which was permitted to die in a Chicago hospital seven years ago because it would grow up mentally defective. The late Dr. Harry J. Haiselden refused to perform an operation on the Bellinger child which would have saved its life.

Because the Lebrasca child's deformity will be only physical, no doctor would be justified in acceding to a plea to end the child's life, said Dr. Benjamin H. Breakstone, chief surgeon at the West End Hospital, where the child was born.

"What right have we to take life from this baby, who being perfectly normal otherwise, may some day marry, have a family and leave useful posterity?" he asked.

Physicians, he said, often are asked to act as judge, jury and executioner in similar cases, where parents of such children base their pleas on "sociological arguments."

"If this child lives, will it not be a burden to the community, if the sociological argument is advanced?" Dr. Breakstone declared.

SHOULD BE SPARED LIFE.

"Remember, the brain of this infant is not subnormal. It may have a wonderful mentality waiting for development. The child may be a mental genius."

Dr. Julius I. Mandel, another of the consulting surgeons, and an authority on genealogy, said:

"As this child has no voice in the matter, as individuals, interested keenly in the public welfare, we must decide for it.

"I believe firmly that this child should be allowed to live and enjoy the fruits of life, as nature originally intended it to do."

Dr. S. W. Brownstein, who was called in for consultation asserted that "it is legally and morally prohibited that we take its life."

"Society," he added, "ought to step in and care for such a baby, attend to its wants and educate it to such a degree that it need not become a burden.

STAND OF PARENTS.

"Such a mind as this baby has may develop until it reflects views, emotions or ideas of which the normal person is incapable."

"Neither my wife nor I shall shirk our responsibility in caring for our baby," said Mr. Lebrasca, the child's father. "It shall be placed in a hospital and everything humanly possible shall be done for it."

Betrothal of Ailsa Mellon Only Vague Rumor, Betty Alden Asserts

By BETTY ALDEN.

DESPITE the fact that Dame Rumor has been exercising an overly busy tongue in linking Miss Ailsa Mellon's name with that of several young men of rising importance at the national capital, as yet there has been no official announcement of her betrothal to anyone.

Last Summer, in fact, until late into the Fall, Miss Mellon reigned as the youthful, but highly capable, chatelaine of "Avalon," the Pride's Crossing estate of the Keith Merrills, which her father, Andrew Mellon, Secretary of the Treasury, had leased for the season. Oftentimes during the Summer months there were jolly parties held at "Avalon" for members of the younger set along the Shore.

Now Miss Mellon is back in Washington with her father, after spending several weeks in Havana with Miss Margaret Harding and her father, William P. G. Harding, of the Federal Reserve Board. The latter is the father of Mrs. Freddy Prince, Jr., of Boston, and Mrs. Robert Thompson Pell, (Alice Harding), whose marriage early in September at St. John's Church in Beverly Farms was one of the North Shore's most important ceremonials, and at which Miss Ailsa Mellon was of the bridesmaids' group. Miss Margaret Harding, who is really quite a beauty, was maid-of-honor. Both the Freddy Princes, Jr., and the youthful Robert Pells are now abroad.

I EXPECT that the Army and Navy Ball, scheduled to take place on December 15 at the East State Armory, will attract a host of fashionables, though unfortunately, the first of the Senior Supper Dances will be held on the same evening at the Copley-Plaza. However, since society has acquired the fad of "going on" from one terpsichorean affair to another, this is not such a disaster after all.

The proceeds of the Army and Navy Ball will be used to carry on the work of the Army and Navy Club for the men in the Army, Navy and Marine Corps, for the disabled men taking training under the Veterans' Bureau, and the wounded veterans now in the hospitals. This will be done through the Army and Navy Club and its hospital committee.

A few of the many prominent folk whose names are included on the ball committee are Mrs. George R. Fearing, chairman; Mrs. Edwin S. Webster, Mrs. Russell Codman, Mrs. J. Malcolm Forbes, Mrs. William S. H. Lothrop, Mrs. Frederick S. Whitewell and Mrs. Thomas Thacher.

MR. AND MRS. JAMES R. HOOPER, I hear, are giving a ball on December 6 to introduce their daughter, Miss Gertrude Hooper, who was of the lucky group "making" the Junior League.

The Hoopers are holding this affair at the Hotel Somerset, and unless I am greatly mistaken, it will be one of the most exclusive events of the season, for the clan of Hooper is easily one of Boston's most "blue-blooded" families. S. Hooper Hooper, ever since the Assemblies came into being, has helped to wield the much-feared blue pencil which sets up the invitation list for these ultra-exclusive affairs. Speaking of the Assemblies, once more will there be the usual heart-aches, for the coveted invitations have already been issued to the chosen few. Of those who said "thumbs up" or "down" in the invitation question were Mesdames Nathaniel Thayer, Edward Brandegee and Bayard Warren, as well as Messrs. S. Hooper Hooper, Harcourt Amory, J. Grafton Minot and George Peabody, Jr.

MRS. VALENTINE HOLLINGSWORTH, who joined the the Boston colony at Hot Springs about a fortnight ago, drove over to Fassifern Farm the other day for luncheon with Miss Mary Gordon of Baltimore. The two returned to the Virginia resort over the Bacova Bridge.

Mrs. Hollingsworth, known as one of the most devoted charity workers along the North Shore, where she and her family Summer at Beverly Farms, is always seen costumed entirely in white during the Summer months. Never once did I see her last Summer with even a touch of any other color to brighten her all-white raiment.

MRS. MARLAND HOBBS of Brookline is making a brief visit in Philadelphia, though she plans to be back in Boston for the Atlantic City Boardwalk Exposition. She and her sister-in-law, Miss Rebekah Hobbs, have charge of selecting the young girls who will serve as ushers at the Boardwalk Theatre, which is to be one of the most entertaining features of the exposition.

JURORS CUT CARDS TO DECIDE VERDICT

Sioux Falls, S. D., Nov. 21.—A verdict of guilty returned against George W. Egan, three times candidate for Governor of South Dakota, on a charge of making false returns to insurance companies and resulting in a sentence to two years was obtained through cutting of a deck of cards, according to affidavits filed today by two of the jurors. The affidavits were filed in support of a motion for a new trial.

OWN KIN LOST THEIR SAVINGS IN PONZI CRASH

Charles Ponzi, as his own counsel, quizzed his brother-in-law, Rinaldo Bosselli, who was on the witness stand in his own behalf, at today's session of the trial of Ponzi and five alleged agents for conspiracy to defraud investors.

Q.—Did you hear me tell you to take your money out in time for the crash? A.—No.

Q.—Did you hear me tell any of my friends or relatives that? A.—No.

Q.—Did I treat you any differently than any of my investors, though you are my brother-in-law? A.—No.

INVESTED FOR BABIES.

Bosselli, one of the defendants, told in direct examination by his lawyer, John F. McDonald, how he gave up a meat cutter's job to work for Ponzi at $30 a week and how he and all his family invested in the Ponzi scheme, even to accounts on their babies' names.

He first invested $50; then kept re-investing. He drew $200 from the bank and put that in. His wife drew her $200 savings and invested. They had a $50 account in the name of one of their babies and $75 in the name of the other. His mother invested her savings.

PUT IN $2,000 LAST DAY.

July 24, 1920, the day before the Ponzi crash, Bosselli put $2,000 in commissions into the scheme. The next day the crash came without warning to him. He said he always had faith in the business.

Cross-examined by Special Assistant Attorney-General William Flaherty, Bosselli admitted that all the international reply coupons he ever saw were nine or ten which he had to show to customers.

Q.—Did you know anything about Luci Meli (private secretary to Ponzi) signing your wife's name to a $100,000 check? A.—The first I knew about it was in court.

Bosselli admitted Ponzi told him he (Ponzi) made 100 to 150 per cent. on the business and gave investors 50 per cent. in forty-five days. But he declared Ponzi told him none of the details of the business.

HEARD 'EVERYONE HAS TO BE PAID,' SAYS FIN. COM. WITNESS

TELLS OF DEAL FOR LAND

at it was to be made through a man they had made arrangements with but he mentioned no names.

Q.—Did you ask the name of this man? A.—Yes but he refused to give it to me.

"ALL HAD TO BE PAID."

Later, the witness said he learned from other members of the congregation that the man referred to was former Senator John J. Gartland.

He further stated that during the discussion at this meeting it came out that an effort was being made to have the City Treasurer write out two checks, one of $46,000 to go to the congregation and the other of $10,000 to go to the various persons who had claims for "commission and other work."

Q.—Did Heller say on more than one occasion, in referring to the $4,000, that the money had gone to the Councillors? A.—He stated on several occasions that everybody at City Hall was to be paid, from the Big Chief down.

Q.—Did he say who he meant by the Big Chief? A.—No.

Q.—Was any name given? A.—Not to me.

The witness told of a meeting of the directors at which he served as temporary secretary at which President Heller said he would agree to Gordon acting as secretary only on condition he kept his mouth shut.

PT IN IGNORANCE.

e said that with the exception of er and David Ballen, the congration was kept in ignorance as the transaction with the city, alrough much effort was made to scover why such a large amount had to be expended to put the deal through.

Charges that the Finance Commission was acting unfairly in questioning witnesses were made by Attorney O'Connell.

Attorney O'Connell is counsel for President Heller and John J. Conroy, the latter's business partner, also named as one of the men who assisted in putting through the sale. Attorney O'Connell asked for permission to cross-examine.

Previously Attorney John W. E. Crowley, representing Ballen and Mrs. Mary Agnes Mahan, an attorney, also named in the transaction, had been stopped fr questioning Gordon by Chairman Michael H. Sullivan, on the grounds that the examination was bringing out facts irrelevant to the issue.

Chairman Sullivan insisted that hereafter in the hearing the commission's previous rule that counsel must submit all questions to be asked witnesses in writing to the commission, except when the witness is a client of the attorney asking the questions, be observed.

Attorney O'Connell, manifestly angered by the commission's ruling shouted that the ruling was outrageous. He pounded a desk as he talked.

OPPOSES RULING.

"When a man is accused of a crime, as my client is by this witness, he has a right to meet his accuser face to face. Your ruling is not a just one. It is not in the interests of fair play."

"That is our ruling and it must stay," answered Chairman Sullivan.

"Yes," retorted Attorney O'Connell, "and I must abide with it, but I will say that it is an established fact that the weakness of our judicial system is that of interrogations."

Later Attorney O'Connell submitted one question in writing to the commission, but it was turned down.

It came out during the discussion as to the right to question witnesses that Heller, Ballen and Mrs. Mahan all have suits against the congregation for service rendered in connection with the sale to the city.

Gordon admitted that when the purchase price was paid by the city it was discovered that Heller and Mrs. Mahan had attached the property for $25,000 "for services, etc.," but before the sale was consummated the directors of the congregation were forced to give a bond this amount.

IK MAN CALLED.

ordon told of attempts to sell the property that were frustrated by the licensing board which refused parties who wished to purchase it for $51,000 a license for a movie house. He said Heller had been excluded from the committee by the directors.

"Why was he excluded?" asked Attorney Dowling.

"Because they mistrusted him and because he demanded that the check for $10,000 over the price of $46,000 be made out in a separate check, refusing to say what it was for.

"Did Ballen say he would tell the whole story of the transaction if he was paid the $4,000?" was the last question asked him.

"Not at that time. Nor to me."

Allen R. Morse, assistant treasurer of the United States Trust Company, testified Ballen, on August 14, drew a certificate of deposit for $4,000. On September 7, $2,000 was drawn by Ballen and paid to Gartland. On October 7, $2,000 more was paid to him.

David Ballen was next called. His testimony was frequently interrupted by clashes of counsel.

Ballen told of his efforts to sell the property, first engaging Richard Pinksohn. Attorney Dowling then went into the contents of the letters previously produced in which Ballen had demanded that the congregation accept $46,000 for the property, the balance to pay expenses.

Q.—You wrote to the congregation saying it was going to be much more expensive to sell to the city. What did you mean? A.—Heller called me up one day and told me to come to his office. He told me he had some one who could make the sale and that he would not take any pay until after the money had been paid to the congregation.

Q.—Was Mr. Conroy there? A.—Not then. Mr. Conroy and Mr. Heller and Mrs. Mahan and I walked up to Heller's office later. They said they had a broker who could put the deal all through.

Q.—Did Heller tell you the price had been reduced from $5,000 to $4,000? A.—I could not remember.

Q.—When did you learn it had been reduced? A.—When I met him in the office of Mr. Heller.

Q.—Was Mr. Gartland the broker previously mentioned who wanted $5,000? A.—When I met him I was surprised. I said, "$5,000." He said it would be worth it to me.

Q.—Did he say he had influence at City Hall? A.—I did not ask it.

Q.—Were you afraid to ask him? A.—Wrong things never enter my head. I did not think about the city council.

"Brickley and Walsh will be called to tell what they know of this deal; the Mayor may be called."

Attorney John C. L. Dowling, counsel for the Boston Finance Commission, said this today, just before hearing was resumed.

MRS. FELTON IS SWORN AS SENATOR

By International News Service.

Washington, Nov. 21.—The Star of woman suffrage reached its greatest ascendancy in American history today when Mrs. W. H. Felton, the "Grand Old Woman of Georgia," was formally seated as a full-fledged Senator of the United States.

She is the first woman Senator ever to take the oath of office on the floor of the Senate.

Mrs. Felton won her senatorship when chivalry triumphed over legality. A single objection from any one of the ninety-five mile Senators would have prevented her taking her seat. None objected.

U. S. WILL HELP CURB KU KLUX, SAYS HARDING

Washington, Nov. 21.—Replying to a request from Governor Parker, of Louisiana, for Federal assistance in cutting off outside support and encouragement which the government asserts is being received by the Ku Klux Klan in that State, President Harding has given assurance that wherever Federal interests were involved the Federal authorities were ready to extend full co-operation.

At the White House conference during which the Governor's request was made, however, it was agreed with Attorney-General Daugherty and the attorney-general of Louisiana, A. V. Coco, who also attended, concurring, that the State government would be fully able to take care of the situation.

Governor Parker, on leaving the conference, declared that "regardless of cost or consequence," the State authorities were determined to make a thorough investigation of reported outrages by the Klan in Louisiana.

That there prevailed in that State, however, any such situation as pictured in articles written by a staff correspondent of the Washington Post and given wide publication, was vigorously denied by Governor Parker.

Characterizing as one of the "most amazingly inaccurate observations" he had ever read in a newspaper, the statement that the Klan "has reduced the sovereign State of Louisiana to the vassalage of the Invisible Empire," Mr. Parker added that the article was "a slander on Louisiana and its chief executive."

cephalic type; his body that of a fighting Souave, the shape of man that marched into Gaul with Caesar and won his battles. Many kinds of men are mixed in the blood of Clemenceau, and they are all fighters.

FIFTY-SEVEN YEARS ago Clemenceau was in America. Our talk then was of Lincoln murdered. The heavy problem of reconstruction distressed us, as it distresses France today.

He says "here I learned to have a will and reach a decision."

Good formula to remember. But will and decision were born in the shape of his head.

CLEMENCEAU THINKS only of France and her problems, of her hope in this republic. There is great beauty in his face and voice, and his old eyes burn as he talks of France, "an old race that has got a very heavy story in the past."

HE STEADIES his voice and talks slowly when he reminds you that France mobilized eight millions of men and had five and a half millions of them killed, mutilated and wounded.

Those are real deaths, real wounds to him, not mere "war statistics." You may not agree with his plans for rebuilding Europe with safety for freedom and civilization after you read his speech to be made tonight. In fact, he forces no definite plan upon you. Whatever your thoug'', you could not argue with a man who every day looks down, in thought, upon the graves of ruined lives of five millions of his brothers.

YOU BELIEVE and hope that he will find here only sympathy and affection. A man whose heart is in France and who brings his tired brain and body here to make his appeal, "one man to 100 millions." Do not sit passive and allow France, that has done so much for the world, to sink into the grave. He asks no sympathy, however, "but, if it must happen, I should be proud to be one of the last of the Frenchmen."

THE EDITORS saw Clemenceau, and never saw a nobler, more real man. Perhaps you would like to know what he saw, after being told that the 'great editors and publishers of America would meet him."

There was Cuddihy, of the Literary Digest, whose specialty is feeding anybody that is hungry and lives at least seven thousand miles away. Not "feed my lambs," but "feed Persian lambs, Armenian lambs, Russian lambs and foreign kind of lambs," is his motto.

THERE WAS Mr. Ochs of the New York Times. Fame and prosperity have taken him for a terribly long walk and looks as though he sometimes wishes he had stayed home. It's a terrible thing to have so much money that you don't want any more.

Louis Wiley, combination king of business managers and society experts, is with him, like Cupid accompanying Mars.

THERE IS Frank Munsey, who has killed more newspapers than Herod killed infants. He smokes a cigarette in a very long white holder, which he throws away each time, as though money grew on trees. He is a perfect sample of the man of the world, and when he gives you a lift down to the office tells you to have your limousine rebuilt with the rear seat 20 inches forward of the rear axle.

THERE WERE all the regular line of great editors, Melville Stone, who gave the Chicago News its start, and sold it. Mitchel, who made the Sun's editorial page in Dana's time. He has the best American brain in the room, by 50 per cent. Frank Cobb, who writes a good editorial—that's not easy. Lippman, a young one that will go far, if not too easily satisfied. Rollo Ogden, of the Times, who knows how Ulysses felt, when he got home safe. If he smiles dreamily, he is thinking about Lamont, of Morgan and Company "improving" the Post. A Wall street gentleman improving a newspaper is one of the curiosities of nature.

YOU WOULD have noticed especially Charles Dana Gibson, who looks more and more like somebody's ancestor. He has been in this sold world about 50 years and knows less about it than when he arrived. Innocence, goodness, high thoughts and hard, earnest work have made of his face a model that should be framed in every nursery.

Others there were Wardman, who made the Post, only to have it bought, then slaughtered by Munsey, like Simon Legree buying a colored baby's child and drowning it. Wardman is disillusioned. There was Swope. He is not disillusioned. The suns whirl and daisies sprout, comets rush from him, life is beautiful and so is he.

CLEMENCEAU, LOOKING at the "greatest editors," may have said to himself, "I'd like to see the others. Just out of curiosity."

PASS SUBSIDY BILL NOW, SAYS PRESIDENT

DOLLARS AND CENTS PLEA MADE TO CONGRESS

its favorable report speedily will be given the force of law.

It will be helpful in clearing the atmosphere if we start with the frank recognition of divided opinion and determined opposition.

It is no new experience. Like proposals have divided the Congress on various previous occasions. Perhaps a more resolute hostility never was manifest before and I am very sure the need for decisive action—decisive, favorable action—never was so urgent before.

NOT THEORY, BUT GRIM FACT.

We are not now dealing with a policy founded on theory. We have a problem which is one of grim actuality. We are facing insistent conditions, out of which will come either additional and staggering government losses and national impotence on the seas, or else the unfurling of the flag on a great American merchant marine commensurate with our commercial importance, to serve as carrier of our cargoes in peace and meet the necessities of our defence in war.

There is no thought here and now to magnify the relation of a merchant marine to our national defence. It is enough to recall that we entered the World War almost wholly dependent on our allies for transportation by sea.

We expended approximately $3,000,000,000 feverishly, extravagantly, wasteiully and unpractically, out of our eagerness to make up for the omissions of peace and to meet the war emergency, we builded and otherwise acquired the vast merchant fleet which the government owns today.

In the simplest way I can say it, our immediate problem is not to build and support a merchant shipping, which I hold to be one of the highest and most worthy aspirations of any great people; our problem is to deal with what we now possess.

Our problem is to relieve the public treasury of the drain it is already meeting.

Let us omit particulars about the frenzied war-time building. Possibly we did full as well as could have been done in the anxious circumstances.

BUSINESS VIEWPOINT.

Let us pass for the moment the vital relationship between a merchant marine and a commercially aspiring nation. Aye, let us suppose, for a moment the absurdity that with one $3,000,000,000 experience and with the incalculable costs in lives and treasure which may be chargeable to our inability promptly to apply our potency—which God forefend happening again—let us momentarily ignore all of these and turn to note the mere business problem, the practical question of dollars and cents, with which we are confronted.

The war construction and the later completion of war contracts, where completing was believed to be the greater economy to the public treasury, left us approximately 13,200,000 gross tonnage in ships. The figures are nearer 12,500,000 tons now, owing to the scrapping of the wooden fleet.

More than half this tonnage is government-owned and approximately 2,250,000 tons are under government operation in one form or another. The net loss to the United States treasury, sums actually taken therefrom in this government operation, averaged approximately $18,000,000 per month during the year prior to the assumption of responsibility by the present administration.

RECENT SAVINGS.

A constant warfare on this loss of public funds and the draft to service of capable business management and experienced operating directions have resulted in applied efficiency and enforced economies.

It is very gratifying to report the diminution of the losses to $4,000 000 per month, or a total of $50,000,000 a year; but it is intolerable that the government should continue a policy from which so enormous a treasury loss is the inevitable outcome. This loss, moreover, attends operation of less than a third of the government owned fleet.

It is, therefore, not a question of adding new treasury burdens to maintain our shipping; we are paying these burdens now. It is not a question of contracting an outlay to support our merchant shipping because we are paying already.

I am not asking your authorization of a new and added draft on the public treasury; I am appealing for a program to diminish the burden we are already bearing.

When your executive government knows of public expenditures aggregating fifty millions annually, which it believes could be reduced by half through a change of policy, your government would be unworthy of public trust if such a change were not commended, nay if it were not insistently urged.

LOSSES UNNECESSARY.

And the pity of it is that our present expenditures in losses is not constructive. It looks to no future attainments. It is utterly ineffective in the establishment of a dependable merchant marine, whereas, the encouragement of private ownership and the application of individual initiative would make for a permanent creation, ready and answerable at all times to the needs of the nation.

But I have not properly portrayed all the current losses to the public treasury. We are wearing out our ships without any provision for replacement. We are having these losses through deterioration now and are charging nothing against our capital account.

But the losses are there, and regretably larger under government operation than under private control. Only a few years of continued losses on capital account will make these losses through depreciation alone to exceed the fifty millions a year now drawn to cover losses in operation.

The gloomy picture of losses does not end even there. Notwithstanding the known war cost of three billions of dollars for the present tonnage, I will not venture to appraise its cash value today.

It may as well be confessed now as at some later time that in the mad rush to build, in establishing shipyards wherever men would organize to expend government money, when we made shipbuilders overnight quite without regard to previous occupations or pursuits, we builded poorly, often very poorly.

Moreover we constructed without any formulated program for a merchant marine. The war emergency impelled and the cry was for ships, any kind of ships. The error is recalled in regret, rather than in criticism.

The point is that our fleet, costing approximately three billions, is worth only a fraction of that cost today. Whatever that fraction may be, the truth remains that we have no market in which to sell the ships under our present policy, and a program of surrender and sacrifice and the liquidation which is inevitable unless the pending legislation is sanctioned, will cost scores of millions more.

When the question is asked, why the insistence for the merchant marine act now? the answer is apparent.

Waiving every inspiration which line is a constructive plan for maintaining our flag on the commercial highways of the seas, waiving the prudence in safeguarding against another serious $2,000,000,000 madness, if war ever again impels we have the unavoidable task of wiping out a $50,000,000 annual loss in operation and losses aggregating many hundreds of millions in wornout, sacrificed, or scrapped shipping.

HUMILIATING CONDITION.

Then there is the supreme humiliation, the admission that the United States, our America, once eminent among the maritime nations of the world, is incapable of asserting itself in the peace triumphs on the seas of the world.

It would seem to be doubly humiliating when we own the ships and fail in the genius and capacity to turn their prows towards the marts of the world.

This problem can no longer be ignored. Its attempted solution cannot longer be postponed. The failure of Congress to act decisively will be no less disastrous than adverse action.

HARDING DEMANDS SHIP SUBSIDY TO SAVE NATIONAL TREASURY

DECLARES FOREIGN POWERS BACK OPPOSITION HERE

Three courses of action are possible, and the choice among them is no longer to be avoided.

THREE COURSES OPEN.

The first is constructive—enact the pending bill, under which, I believe, an American merchant marine, privately owned and privately operated, but serving all the people and always available to the government in any emergency, may be established and maintained.

The second is obstructive—continue government operation and attending government losses and discourage private enterprise by governmental competition, under which losses are met by the public treasury and witness the continued losses and deterioration, until the colossal failure ends in sheer exhaustion.

The third is destructive—involving the sacrifice of our ships abroad or the scrapping of them at home, the surrender of our aspirations and the confession of our impotence to the world in general and our humiliation before the competing world in particular.

A choice among the three is inevitable. It is unbelievable that the American people or the Congress, which expresses their power, will consent to surrender and destruction. It is equally unbelievable that our people and the Congress which translates their wishes into action will longer sustain a program of obstruction and attending losses to the treasury.

FOR CONSTRUCTIVE PLAN.

I have come to urge the constructive alternative, to reassert an American "we will."

I have come to ask you to relieve the responsible administrative branch of the government from a program upon which failure and hopelessness and staggering loss are written for every page, and let us turn to a program of assured shipping to serve us in war and to give guaranty to our commercial independence in peace.

I know full well the hostility in the popular mind to the word "subsidy." It is stressed by the opposition and associated with "special privilege" by those who are unfailing advocates of government aid, whenever vast numbers are directly concerned.

"Government aid" would be a fairer term than "subsidy" in defining what we are seeking to do for our merchant marine, and the interests are those of all the people, even though the aid goes to the few who serve.

If government aid is a fair term—and I think it is—to apply to authorizations aggregating $75,000,000 to promote good roads for market highways, it is equally fit to be applied to the establishment and maintenance of American market highways on the salted seas.

If government aid is the proper designation for fifteen to forty millions annually expended to improve and maintain inland waterways in aid of commerce, it is a proper designation for a needed assistance to establish and maintain ocean highways where there is actual commerce to be carried.

TO SAVE MANY MILLIONS.

But call it "subsidy" since there are those who prefer to appeal to mistaken prejudice rather than make frank and logical argument. We might so call the annual loss of fifty millions, which we are paying now without protest by those who most abhor it, we might as well call that a "subsidy."

If so I am proposing to cut it in half, approximately, and to the saving thus effected, there would be added millions upon millions of further savings through ending losses on capital account—government capital, out of the public treasury, always remember—and there would be at least the promise and the aspect of the permanent establishment of the needed merchant marine.

I challenge every insinuation of favored interests and the enrichment of the special few at the expense of the public treasury.

I am, first of all, appealing to save the treasury. Perhaps the unlimited bestowal of government aid might justify the apprehension of special favoring, but the pending bill, the first ever proposed which carries such a provision, automatically guards against enrichment or perpetuated bestowal.

U. S. AID LIMITED.

It provides that shipping lines receiving government aid must have their actual investment and their operating expenses audited by the government, that government aid will only be paid until the shipping enterprise earns 10 per cent. on actual capital employed, and immediately that when more than 10 per cent. earning is reached, half of the excess earnings must be applied to the repayment of the government aid which has been previously advanced.

Thus the possible earnings are limited to a very reasonable amount if capital is to be risked and manage it, it is to be attracted.

If success attends, as we hope it will, the government outlay is returned, the inspiration of opportunity to earn remains, and American transportation by sea is established.

Though differing in detail, it is not more in proportion to their population and capacity than other great nations have done in aiding the establishment of their merchant marines and it is timely to recall that we gave them our commerce to aid in their upbuilding, while the American task now is to upbuild and establish in the face of their most active competition.

OBSTACLES TO OVERCOME.

Indeed, the American development will have to overcome every obstacle which may be put in our path, except as international comity forbids. Concern about our policy is not limited to our own domain, though the interest abroad is of very differing character.

I hope it is acsonly to say it, because it must be said, the maritime nations of the world are in complete accord with the opposition here to the pending measure.

They have a perfect right to such an attitude. When we look from their viewpoints we can understand.

But I wish to stress the American viewpoint from which one sees American carriers at sea, the dependence of American commerce and American vessels for American reliance in the event of war.

Some of the costly lessons of war must be learned again and again, but our shipping lesson in the World War was much too costly to be effaced from the memory of this or future generations.

Not so many months ago are the head of a company operating a fleet of ships under our flag called at the executive offices to discuss a permit to transfer his fleet of cargo vessels to a foreign flag, though he meant to continue them in a distinctly American service.

He based his request for transfer on the allegation that by such a transfer he could reduce his labor costs alone sufficiently to provide a profit on capital invested.

I do not vouch for the accuracy of the statement, nor mean to discuss it. The allusion is made to recall that in good conscience Congress has created by law conditions surrounding labor on American ships which shipping men the world over declare result in higher costs of operation under our flag.

REJOICES IN LABOR'S GAIN.

I frankly rejoice if higher standards for labor on American ships have been established. Merest justice suggests that when Congress fixes these standards it is fair to extend government aid in maintaining them until world competition is brought to the same high level, or until our shipping lines are so firmly established that they can face world competition alone.

Having discussed in detail the policy and provisions of the pending bill when previously addressing you, I forbear a repetition now.

In individual exchanges of opinion not a few in the House and Senate have expressed sympathy with the purposes of the bill, then uttered a discouraging doubt about the sentiment of their constituencies.

It would be most discouraging if a measure of such transcending national importance must have its fate depend on geographical, occupational, professional, or partisan objections.

Frankly, I think it loftier statesmanship to support and commend a policy designed to effect the larger good to the nation than merely to record the too hasty impressions of a constituency.

Out of the harmonized aspirations the fully-informed convictions and the united efforts of all the people will come the greater Republic.

Commercial eminence on the seas, ample agencies for the promotion and carrying on of our foreign commerce are of no less importance to the people of Mississippi and the Missouri valley, the great Northwest and the Rocky Mountain States than to the seaboard States and industrial communities building inland a thousand miles or more.

NATIONAL COMMON CAUSE.

It is a common cause, with its benefits commonly shared. When people fall in the national viewpoint and live in the confines of community self-absorbs or narrowness the sun of the Republic will have passed its meridian and our larger aspirations will shrivel in the approaching twilight.

But let us momentarily put aside the aspiring and inspiring viewpoint. The blunt, indisputable fact of the loss of fifty millions a year under government operation remains; likewise the fast diminishing capital account, the enormous war expenditure to which we were forced because we had not fittingly encouraged and builded as our commerce expanded in peace.

Here are facts to deal with, not fancies wrought out of our political and economic disputes. The abolition of the annual loss and the best salvage of the capital account are of concern to all the people.

It is my firm belief that the combined savings of operating losses and the protection of the capital account through more advantageous sales of our war-built, or war-seized ships, because of the favoring policy which the pending bill will establish, will more than pay every dollar expended in government aid for twenty-five years to come.

It should be kept in mind that the approximate sum of five millions annually paid for the transport of ocean mails is no new expenditure.

$30,000,000 A YEAR.

It should be kept in mind that the loan fund to encourage building is not new, it is the law already enacted by essentially unanimous vote of Congress. It is only included in the pending bill in order to amend so as to assure the exaction of a minimum interest rate by the government whereas the existing law leaves the grading of building loans subject to any whim of favoritism.

It should be kept in mind also that there are assured limitations of the government aid proposed. The direct aid, with ocean-carrying maintained at our present participation will not reach twenty millions a year and the maximum direct aid, if our shipping is so promoted that we carry one-half our deep-sea commerce, will not exceed thirty millions annually.

At the very maximum of outlay we should be saving twenty millions of our present annual operating loss. If the maximum is ever reached, the establishment of our merchant marine will have been definitely recorded and the government owned fleet fortunately liquidated.

From this point of view it is the simple, incontestible wisdom of business-like dealing to save all that is possible of the annual loss and avoid the millions sure to be lost to the government's capital account in sacrificing our fleet.

But there is a bigger, broader, more inspiring viewpoint ave, a patriotic viewpoint. I refer to the constructive action of today, which offers the only dependable promise of making our wartime inheritance of ships the foundation of a great agency of commerce in peace and an added guaranty of service when it is necessary to our national defense.

Thus far I have been urging government aid to American shipping, having in mind every interest of our producing population whether of mine, factory, or farm, because expanding commerce is the foremost thought of every nation in the world today. I believe in government aid becomingly bestowed.

We have aided industry through our tariffs; we have aided railway transportation by land grants and loans. We have aided the construction of market roads and the improvement of inland waterways. We have aided reclamation and irrigation and the development of water power. We have loaned for seed and grains in anticipation of harvests. We spend millions in investigation and experimentation to promote a common benefit, though a few are the direct beneficiaries. We have loaned hundreds of millions to promote the marketing of American goods. It has all been commendable and highly worth while.

FARMERS SUFFERING.

At the present moment the American farmer is the chief sufferer from the cruel readjustments which follow war's inflations, and befitting government aid to our farmers is highly essential to our national welfare. No people may safely boast a good fortune which the farmer does not share.

Already this Congress and the administrative branch of the government have given willing ear to the agricultural plea for post war relief and much has been done which has proven helpful. Admittedly, it is not enough. Our credit system, under government provision and control, must be promptly and safely broadened to relieve our agricultural distress.

To this problem and such others of pressing importance as reasonably may be dealt with in the short session I shall invite your intention at an early day.

I have chosen to confine myself to the specific problem of dealing with our merchant marine because I have asked you to assemble two weeks in advance of the regularly appointed time to expedite its consideration.

The executive branch of the government would feel itself remiss to contemplate our yearly loss and attending failure to accomplish if the conditions were not pressed for your decision.

Moreover ,I would feel myself lacking in concern for America's future if I failed to stress the beckon in opportunity to equip the United States to assume a befitting place among the nations of the world whose commerce is inseparable from the good fortunes to which rightfully all peoples aspire.

HARDING URGES QUICK ACTION

favored interests and the enriching of the special few at the expense of the public treasury. The legislation, he asserted, automatically guarded against enrichment or perpetual bestowal.

"If success attends, as we hope it will," he added, "the government outlay is returned, the inspiration of opportunity to earn remains, and American transportation by sea is established."

BENEFITS SPECIFIED.

The President said concern about the American Merchant Marine policy was not limited "to our own domain," adding that the maritime nations of the world were in "complete accord with the opposition here to the pending measure."

He declared those nations had a perfect right to such an attitude, but that he wished to stress the American viewpoint, which he said should be the viewpoint "from which one sees American carriers at sea, the dependence of American commerce, and American vessels for American reliance in the event of war."

A COMMON CAUSE.

Mr. Harding declared it would be most discouraging if a measure of "such transcending national importance" must have its fate depend on geographical, occupational, professional or partisan objection. A commercial eminence on the seas and ample agencies for the promotion in carrying of American commerce, he asserted, were of no less importance to the people of the Mississippi and the Missouri valley, the great Northwest, and the Rocky Mountain States than to the seaboard States and industrial communities inland.

"It is a common cause, with its benefits commonly shared," said he.

If government aid is a fair term to apply to authorizations aggregating $75,000,000 to promote good roads for market highways, the President added, it is equally fit to be applied to the establishment and maintenance of American market highways on the "salted seas."

TO WIPE OUT LOSSES.

As to present government operation of the Shipping Board fleet, Mr. Harding said there was the unavoidable task of wiping out a fifty million dollar annual loss, and losses aggregating "many hundreds of millions" in worn out, sacrificed or scrapped shipping.

He called attention that the government ships were being worn out without any provision for replacement and that a program of surrender and sacrifice and the liquidation which he declared would be inevitable unless the proposed legislation were enacted would cost scores of millions.

The cost of the proposed legislation giving direct aid, he said, with ocean carrying maintained at the present average would not reach $30,000,000 a year, and the maximum direct aid if American shipping were so promoted that it carried one-half the nation's deep-sea commerce would not exceed thirty millions annually.

MARX BROTHERS HEAD BIG BILL AT MAJESTIC

The Four Marx Brothers' Twentieth Century Review furnishes a big bill at the Majestic Theatre this week.

Eddie Cantor, Richard Bennett, J. J. Rosenthal and many other professionals were seen in the audience during the matinee performance, for the Four Marx Brothers have always been the favorite performers of the actors—the bad boys of the profession.

It is without a doubt the funniest and best unit now playing the Shubert circuit, and the audience rocked almost without pause at the antics of the four brothers—Julius, Arthur, Leo and Herbert—who dominate the unit.

The best part of the show is the "On the Balcony" section, a tabloid musical comedy. Leo's piano playing, Arthur's pantomime and harp playing, Herbert's likable youthfulness and Julius' comedy—he has been talked of as the successor to Sam Bernard—kept the show moving at a fast and terrific pace.

Kranz and White delivered numbers and chatter in the vaudeville section, and were much liked. Olga and Mishka, with Mishka's Russian ballet, offered one of the highest grade dancing acts in American vaudeville.

By all means don't miss this funny four.

BOSTON THEATRE—Dustin Farnum, in "Which Justice Waits," playing at the Boston Theatre, is an interesting tale of love and intrigue surrounding the life of a Klondike gold prospector, in which a bandit band and a lost son play an important part. A vaudeville bill that is full of good dancing, music and humor is headed by an elaborate miniature musical comedy production, "Melody and Steps."

SCOLLAY SQUARE OLYMPIA — The large gathering that attended the opening performances of "The Man Who Saw Tomorrow" at Gordon's Scollay Square Olympia was not disappointed. The picture is most gripping and interesting, while Thomas Meighan, the star, and his supporting company, contributed much to make it enjoyable. Other attractions include the latest news weekly, a new comedy, together with a splendid bill of vaudeville.

GAIETY THEATRE— Harry Hastings' "Knick Knacks," at the Gayety Theatre, present some of the most stylish scenic effects ever staged by a burlesque house. The "Royal Gorge" and "Fountain of Youth" scenes were engaging to the eye with their lighting and costuming effects. Frank X. Silk and Kitty Warren were the featured players in "A Silk Stocking Revue of Up and Down Broadway." Silk, as tramp comedian, was aided in his never-ceasing comedy by Dick Hulse. The two made an irresistible team. Miss Warren is a dancing fool, a good singer and charmer. "Honeymooning" was a delightful musical interlude, and another hit was "Whistle Around Your Window," with Madlyn Worth demonstrating just how it could be done. And she certainly can whistle.

HOWDOIN SQ. THEATRE—The new feature at the Howdoin Square Theatre was "The Queen of Sheba," in which Betty Blythe was starred. There was also a program of vaudeville.

Other Theatres

STATE THEATRE—Rex Ingram's claim to film immortality is justified again in his remarkable new production, "Trifling Women," which is presented on the screen of Loew's State Theatre. The young director, in his latest work maintains the high standard of his earlier photoplays. The story of "Trifling Women" was written and adapted by Mr. Ingram himself. It concerns a mysteriously fascinating siren, a crystal gazer, Father and son enter competition for her favors and friends conspire against each other for her love. How she attains wealth and power through a marriage with a wealthy marquis; how she arranges his death to marry her young lover, Ivan; how she meets a terrible end with her lover when her husband finds them together makes a graphic and dramatic story.

In the cast are brilliant players: Lewis Stone is seen as the Marquis Ferroni; Barbara La Marr as Zareda; Ramon Novarro as Ivan, and Edward Connelly as Ivan's father, Baron de Maupin.

An especially fine comedy, "Frozen North," with Buster Keaton as the star, and a pictorial news are also shown.

MODERN AND BEACON—Mae Marsh registered strongly in her return to the screen in the photoplay, "Till We Meet Again," and a production with a really big idea, "The Sin Flood," both new pictures forming the bill at the Modern and Beacon Theatres this week. As add ed good measure there are also shown Buster Keaton in "Frozen North" and the news pictures.

"The Sin Flood" is a filming of the play by Henning Berger, the Swedish dramatist, which in turn was played in English under the title, "The Deluge." Admirably produced and splendidly acted by a cast headed by Helene Chadwick and Richard Dix, it is truly a noteworthy production.

LOEW'S ORPHEUM—One of the best photoplays of the season at Loew's Orpheum Theatre is "Trifling Women," the Rex Ingram production; which is seen for the first time in this city. Mr. Ingram's dramatic story deals with the fatal power of the beautiful Zareda, crystal gazer, for whose favor men conspire against each other. Nothing that Mr. Ingram has done before can approach for dramatic thrill the smashing and tragic climax of this scene where the lovers meet their death. The cast is an especially selected one, including Lewis Stone, Barbara La Marr, Ramon Novarro and Edward Connelly.

The vaudeville program also was of extraordinary merit. Buster Keaton, in his latest comedy, "Frozen North," and a late news pictorial completed the program.

SOMERVILLE PLAYERS—It is not the simplest thing in the world for a stock company to put on a Cohan show and give entire satisfaction; but that is exactly what the members of the Somerville Players did when they presented George M.'s Broadway success "The Meanest Man in the World," at their popular playhouse. The story centers around Richard Clarke, who is revealed as a lawyer of little business who lets his people default in their bills and is in consequence unable to pay his own. Upon the advice of his friends he determines to become hard-hearted and relentless in all legal matters placed in his care. This situation becomes complicated when he finds that the girl with whom he is in love becomes a victim of hards methods.

There are many Cohanesque whirls of action as the story develops. Harry Bond was particularly effective and Ann Hamilton, as the sweetheart, could not be improved upon.

COHAN COMEDY FINELY DONE AT ST. JAMES

By NICHOLAS YOUNG.

Virtue always takes good care of itself in the drama. It may get a jolt here and there in life, but back of the footlights things are different, as you discovered at the St. James Theatre last evening when "The Meanest Man in the World" made a somewhat belated local appearance.

Just how this sentimental and extremely amusing semi-rural comedy escaped Boston when George M. Cohan was its professional sponsor is not clear, but the fact remains that home lingerers took their first glimpses at it last night. As things go, it was a satisfactory evening. Augustin McHugh's play proved sentimental enough to catch the taste of those who enjoy sugar-coated entertainment, and rural enough to grow a fine crop of familiar up-state characters who mix piety with hard shelled business and preach philosophy while mending shoes.

FRIENDLY AUDIENCE.

As interpreted by Mr. Giles' actors, the play got much more than an even break, although it was hard to tell just who the author had in mind for the title role. In any event, all the meanness was washed out of everybody before the second act had moved up to its big scene, and you received full assurance that general felicitations were in order. A friendly audience bestowed its best approval on the company's efforts. It did this collectively—and individually. Nobody was overlooked—not even the hard working director of the orchestra, who labored manfully. The orchestra was more than an incident to the performance—it was an important and dignified part of it.

It was evident from the start that the audience was going to settle down to an evening of keen enjoyment. In rare stock audience fashion it reached across the footlights and shook hands with its favorites, and that means it went right through the liar, Walter Gilbert, who usually does things well, rounded with a fine performance. He carried a heavy load of artistic responsibility and made it appear simple.

EVETA NUDSEN CLEVER

Houston Richards caught the fancy of the audience with his sophisticated comedy and Eveta Nudsen, with flaming hair and a well ordered manner of acting, gave the performance a fanciful coloring. Mark Kent, who might have been the "meanest" man, gave a go-as account of himself, and Lucille Adams, Hugh Cairns, Viola Roach, William Jeffrey, Edward Darney and Ralph M. Remley met all the demands of their roles.

Those whose taste in dramatic fare runs to sentimental comedy, with a hard-fisted villain yielding finally to the dashing blonde hero, will find "The Meanest Man in the World" will understand one of the Boston Stock Company's notable contributions to the current season.

Plays That Remain

COLONIAL — George White's Scandals is nearing the end of its stay in Boston. This colorful entertainment enters upon its last three weeks at the Colonial.

HOLLIS—Richard Bennett and the Theatre Guild production of "He Who Gets Slapped," began another week at the Hollis. This unusual play will remain but two more weeks.

PLYMOUTH—Pauline Lord continues in the Eugene O'Neill play, "Anna Christie," at the Plymouth. The attraction is now on the two final weeks of its local engagement.

SELWYN—High spirits continue at the Selwyn, where "It's A Boy" is spreading good cheer among eager theatre goers. Incidentally, this William Anthony McGuire comedy is a brilliantly written play.

TREMONT—"Captain Applejack" began a new week at the Tremont Theatre. This interesting comedy, in which Wallace Eddinger and Mary Nash are starred, is setting up a new record in laugh-making.

SHUBERT—Entering upon his two final weeks at the Shubert, Eddie Cantor continued faithfully as the merry leader of "Make It Snappy." This is one of the best of the Winter Garden shows.

WILBUR—The thrills and chills of "The Bat" moved into their twelfth week at the Wilbur. A delightful feature of this shock-play is the smart comedy that invades every thrilling situation.

Benefit for Service Men

This afternoon at 2:30, at the Colonial Theatre, there will be presented a show of which the talent is composed of leading players from principal attractions now playing Boston, the proceeds of which will be devoted to the providing of Thanksgiving and Christmas comforts and gifts for ex-service men in hospitals. The show is given under the auspices of the Community Service, Inc., and the Association of Theatre Managers.

Among the artists to appear are W. C. Fields, Paul Whiteman's Palais Royal Orchestra, Lester Allen, Pearl Regay, Richard Bold and Winnie Lightner from George White's Scandals; Lillian Fitzgerald, Muriel de Forrest and George Hale from the Eddie Cantor show; Romanelli Trio and Jack Sidney. Eddie Cantor will act as master of ceremonies.

WALDRON'S CASINO—One can endorse London's taste after seeing "Chuckles of 1923," which won such success at Oxford Music Hall all last Summer. This Jean Bedini production opened at Waldron's Casino and delighted large matinee and evening audience. Vaudeville and motion pictures completed the three-in-one continuous program.

The "Chuckles" outfit is a company of fifty highly entertaining comedians, singers and dancers. Elaine Beasley, prima donna, is clever in song, graceful in dance and charming in personality.

OLYMPIA THEATRE—Heralded by critics throughout the country as Maurice Tourneur's "greatest masterpiece" and a "thrilling dramatic spectacle of unrivalled beauty," "Lorna Doone," opened at Gordon's Olympia Theatre.

Other attractions include the latest news and comic reels, together with five big vaudeville acts.

MARION DAVIES FILLING PARK THEATRE

Marion Davies, in "When Knighthood Was In Flower," continues as the popular attraction at the Park Theatre, with evidence that its extreme popularity is destined to be perpetual.

Not within ready memory has a photoplay manifested such extreme favor, and as a consequence it would appear that new records will be hung up for this class of attraction.

The reason is not hard to seek, because it rests in the all-around excellence of its presentation as well as in the attributes of the production itself.

The result is making photoplay history because it reveals such magnificent perfection in all the attributes a production should have. Irreproachable is the cast that is seen in support of Miss Davies, who has done the finest work of her career.

GLOBE THEATRE—The second and last week of the photoplay, "The Curse of Drink," began at the Globe Theatre. This photoplay unfolds a melodrama replete with thrills of adventure and suspense. The unusual feature of this extraordinary picture is the notable cast of players, at least six of whom are prominent stage and screen stars.

TO END BATTLE FOR LOVE CHILD OUT OF COURT

Mother 'Ready to Wallop Teacher Again'

'MUSTN'T BEAT MY CHILD'

East Boston Woman Tells Court She Will Act Whenever Necessary

Mrs. Susan G. Driver, East Boston mother of seven, told the world today that she would wallop Miss Helen Dooley again "if necessary."

She was before Judge Lane in East Boston Court, when she was telling this, for punching Miss Dooley in the jaw a couple of times last week because Miss Dooley, as school teacher of Mrs. Driver's 12 year-old son Arthur, had disciplined the boy with a rattan.

After being put on probation, Mrs Driver encountered Miss Dooley in the court corridor and made what spectators described as a "half lunge" at the teacher. Miss Dooley threw back her head and went along. Mrs. Driver then delivered this ultimatum to all and several

READY TO REPEAT.

"Regardless of the decision of the judge, if Miss Dooley or any other teacher bothers my child, I will do the same thing again."

Mrs. Driver is thirty-six goes out to work daily to support her brood of seven and to help maintain the Driver home, rear No. 153 Havre street.

Last week Monday Arthur Driver was disciplined by Sub-Master Anderson and the next day by Miss Dooley, the boy's sixth grade room teacher.

Arthur told his mother at noon time and Mrs. Driver hurried to the school and struck Miss Dooley twice which caused her to be in court to day on an assault charge

Miss Dooley had Headmaster George Tyzzer there as witness but his testimony was not necessary as Mrs. Driver pleaded guilty. The court wished to hear the teacher's story. Miss Dooley said:

"Mrs. Driver came in school with fire in her eye and asked me if I had punished her boy. I referred her to Mr. Tyzzer. Mrs. Drive hauled off and stuck me twice on the face."

TELLS OF BATTLE.

Judge: "Did it hurt you?"

Miss Dooley: "Well, it pained me a great deal."

Patrolman Peter McCoy, prosecuting, said: "The government does not desire any serious punishment imposed on Mrs. Driver. It simply does not desire a repetition of this kind of thing."

Judge Lane to Mrs. Driver: "I suppose you are prepared to say you will not do this again."

But the mother of seven was not prepared to say anything of the kind She retorted:

"I'll do it again if it's necessary. she called me a coward and called my boy a coward."

Judge: "Well, that does not justify you in assaulting her. Place her on probation, Mr. Clerk."

Mrs. Driver: "Well, if you place me on probation, place Miss Dooley on probation, too."

Judge: "Miss Dooley is not on trial here. That is all."

Miss Dooley, accompanied by Teachers Katherine Riley, Margaret Kenney and Ethel Kelley, started out. Mrs. Driver reached the corridor first. As the four teachers came along Mrs. Driver is alleged to have made a motion toward Miss Dooley which was called a "half lunge."

An inquest was held today in Brookline Court into the death of Dr. Henry V. Reynolds of No. 112 Salisbury road Brookline, who was killed by William Morgan, a gin crazed negro janitor, on September 21. The principal witnesses were Traffic Officer Alexander Johnston and Bartholomew J. Connolly of No. 17 Regent circle, owner of the apartment building where Morgan was employed. Both were wounded by the drunken janitor. The shooting took place in front of 1768 Beacon street, Brookline. Assistant District Attorney Harold F. Williams of Norfolk County, presented the evidence to the coroner's jury.

Medical Examiner Dow's Passing Complicates Lawrence Murder Case

Lawrence, Nov. 21. — The hand of fate is playing a prominent part in the murder trial of Vito Caruso, charged with slaying his wife last July.

The death of Medical Examiner George W. Dow, almost on the eve of the trial of Caruso, and the fatal shooting of Annie Romano, a prominent witness, on November 4, removed two of the leading witnesses for the prosecution in the Caruso case.

At the time of the killing of the Romano girl, it was first thought that she was shot, with Vincenzo Janni, after a fight over a revolver but later the police linked up the two murders as being connected in a long time feud

With Dr. Dow's presence removed by death, the government is looking to Assistant Medical Examiner Victor W. Reed, who assisted Dr. Dow to present medical testimony at the trials of Caruso and Andrew Romano, father of the Romano girl who is charged with slaying his daughter and Janni.

BORROWED COP AIDS IN RUM CLEAN-UP

Somerville is borrowing police help from the town of Lexington in an effort to stamp out the sale of intoxicating liquor by corner grocery stores.

Other suburban cities have sought aid from the same source in order to an admission made today in Somerville District Court by John Stevenson, a former prohibition enforcement officer. Stevenson is now a special officer on the Lexington police force

"I am loaned by my chief in Lexington to various cities and towns," Stevenson told Judge Sturtevant "to help suppress the sale of liquor in Somerville. While working with the Somerville department, I am paid by them.

"Advise your clients not to sell any more liquor," Judge Sturtevant told attorneys representing Louis Lowenstein of No. 35 Dana street and Angelo Jeffre of No. 181 Pearl street, both of whom operate small stores. "They can't get away with it any more. I am going to stop these illicit sales."

Lowenstein was fined $100 for keeping liquor for sale and another for selling. Jeffre was fined $100 for unlawful sale.

MYSTERY IN FATE OF GIRL

Missing Young Woman Leaves Wedding "Congratulations" In Her Hotel Room

Worcester, Nov. 21.—A comely girl of twenty-five, giving the name of Helen Sterling, registered at the Hotel Bancroft and was assigned to a room.

A short while later reporters startled clerks by telling them that there was a suicide in room 652.

Investigation found no one there, but there were several notes and messages, one of which was addressed to "mother," another of which was addressed to the hotel management and enclosed $5 for the rental.

HINTS AT DROWNING SELF.

The message to mother said that soon "the waters will close over all my trouble," and these, the note asserted, were due to "Will," who had promised to wed and didn't.

Nearby on a dresser were telegrams from Boston, and all expressed congratulations on her marriage. These were signed "George Peabody," "Grace Danneman," "Elisabeth Craig" and "Mother."

All the telegraphic messages arrived inside of a half hour The fact that all came from Boston leads police to believe that the girl either came from that city or else had relatives there.

She registered as coming from Haverhill street, Manchester, N. H., but no one could be found in that city who could shed any light on the matter.

PICTURE MAY BE CLEW.

In the meantime police are making a search. Thus far no trace of the girl has been discovered. No one answering her description was seen leaving the hotel nor the sixth floor.

Officers assigned to the case were inclined to be skeptical because the girl had called the newspaper offices first, saying, "Get reporters over to room 652 and you will find a suicide."

Day's News in Jazz Time

By Morton Birge.

You know about the babies who get lost upon the land.
While all the neighborhood turns out and forms a searching band.
But here's a baby who was "lost" aboard a ship at sea.
While ev'rybody wondered where the blessed child could be

The ocean liner Providence was on her homeward trip:
A baby girl was missing, and they had to stop the ship.
They swung round in a circle, and they scanned the sea with care.
But couldn't find the baby, overboard or anywhere.

And all the time this baby, who was "lost" upon the deep,
Had wandered to a cabin and was coolly asleep.
But finally they found her, and the worried captain said
A thing or two beneath his breath, then yelled: "Full speed ahead!"

News from sea and sky and land

MISS RENIE BUTLER.

This Cambridge girl is not only a beauty but she knows how to stay beautiful. Dance often, but not too late; arise at 5:45; get at least seven hours' sleep; use cosmetics sparingly, and one day in seven for complete rest, are some of her sensible rules.

CAMBRIDGE GIRL PHONE BEAUTY OF NEW ENGLAND

The prettiest telephone girl in New England!

She is Miss Renie Butler of No. 142 Prospect street, Cambridge, awarded that honor at the annual ball of the 40lst Veterans' Association at the State Ball Room.

Here are her rules for keeping fit and beautiful:

Dance often for a lithsome, supple figure and well rounded curves.

Arise at 5:45 each morning; calisthenics before open window; then to work at 7 a. m

Have one day a week for a complete rest and "beauty sleep" with no engagements to interfere. And at least seven hours' sleep a day.

Use cosmetics so sparingly that not even your best friends could trace them Do not harm your hair or eyes by use of any preparations

Keep your callers home early, so that you may get your beauty sleep—except, perhaps, on one or two nights a week

SAY COP GAVE ACCUSED MATE 2 CARTRIDGES

Patrolmen John J. Diggins, Cornelius F. Crowley and John W O'Brien were before a trial board today charged with failure to report that Patrolman Rudolph Trent, ordered, begged them for two cartridges after being accused of attempting an attack on two white girls and firing two shots at their brother

Police officials had previously refused to make public the names of the officers involved. Their identity became known when they appeared before a board composed of Captains Grant, Rooney and Hickey.

Trent, now under suspension, comes up for trial after the case against his fellow officers has been concluded

Trent is accused of having tried to enter the window of a room occupied by the Misses Helen and Mae McAdams in their home, No. 1024 Georges street, Roxbury, the night of October 21.

Peter McAdams, brother of the girls, chased the intruder with a club A short distance from the house two shots were fired. Young McAdams later identified Trent at station 8.

Trent was taken to the station by Officer Kring. It was then that he approached the three patrolmen and asked for two bullets, it is charged Two of them refused, but the third man, it is said, gave him the desired cartridges. These he put in his pistol and hang the weapon in his locker

LAWYERS CONFER IN ODD CASE

Woman Doctor Says Others Know Where Baby is, but They Deny Assertion

Legal battle for the possession of Baby Elizabeth Gillis, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Max Witte, which has started in Roxbury Court, with the parents arrayed against Back Bay doctors and an unknown "wealthy couple" will be averted by a settlement "out of court."

This was the belief expressed today by Attorney Philip R. Ammidon, counsel for Dr Grace A. Jordan, who is charged with violating State law in failing to register the whereabouts of the child when it was taken from its mother to its present foster parents.

"I do not believe that there will be any court case," declared Attorney Ammidon. "I shall not say as to just how we expect to settle the case."

Attorney Ammidon today conferred with Attorney Daniel Daley and it is assumed they reached a tentative agreement.

DEMAND ITS RETURN.

Attorney Daley, earlier in the day, said that if the baby were returned there would be no further prosecution.

Despite statements to the contrary, I was approached, as counsel for Mrs. Witte, with a proposition to accept a cash settlement, on condition that we would 'forget' the child," he said. "I took the matter up with my client and she would not listen to any such proposition."

The court action, continued until Thursday after a preliminary hearing in the Roxbury Court, has disclosed one of the most remarkable situations in Massachusetts' legal history.

Mrs. Witte claims that Elizabeth was born to her before her marriage, he daughter of the man who is now her husband, Dr. May Witte, who was formerly of the City Hospital staff.

DR. JORDAN DEFIANT.

The child was taken from her, she says, and is in the possession of a man and woman she does not know. The couple, said to be extremely wealthy, she accuses of hiding the baby to prevent her from getting it.

According to Mrs. Witte, Dr. Grace Jordan of the Back Bay knows where Elizabeth is and who has her. Dr. Jordan, not denying this statement, declares she will never reveal the little girl's whereabouts, asserting she "will go to jail first."

Mrs. Witte has preferred charges against Dr. Jordan, accusing her of failure to register the child as required by law. She also claims that two other physicians, Dr. L. R. G. Crandon of No. 266 Commonwealth avenue and Dr. William C. Newton, know where the child is.

Dr. and Mrs. Crandon and Dr Newton today denied they know where the baby is.

DR. CRANDON SPEAKS.

"I had nothing to do with this matter," declared Dr. Crandon. "My wife sent a strange woman to Dr. Newton about a year ago, who was seeking a child to adopt, but I was in no way mixed up in the affair. I do not know where the baby is, nor do I know the identity of the so-called 'wealthy couple.'

"About a year ago, at a political rally in Faneuil Hall, I met a woman, who said she was Mrs. Tucker. She told me she was looking for a nice baby girl to adopt. I referred her to Dr. Newton, as I knew he might be able to find such a baby for her. That is all I know of the matter. I have never seen this woman since. The report that this 'wealthy couple' are friends of ours is false. Mrs. Tucker, as she called herself, did not even tell where she lived."

BOGASH WIN OVER DOWNEY MAY LAND BOUT WITH WILSON

COLUMBUS RING STAR OUT OF RUNNING

By JACK CONWAY.

Lou Bogash eliminated Bryan Downey from the race for Johnny Wilson's middleweight crown when he handed the Columbus ring warrior a decisive defeat at the Boston Arena. Bogash won every round but the ninth. In this frame a healthy right hand punch to the jaw gave Downey the margin.

It was a hard, gruelling battle, although not spectacular. Bogash scored a knockdown in the second frame when a left hook to the jaw sent Downey to the canvas. On several other occasions during the hectic fray Lou turned his opponent around as left hand drives counted with deadly effect.

As we pointed out in this column before the tussle, Bogash isn't the fanciest boxer in the world. He is nevertheless fast and rewardingly clever. He managed to keep inside of virtually all of Downey's wild right hand swings, while he, himself, counted heavily at long range and at close quarters.

A left hook, which at times sunk into Downey's body and on other occasions whirled against Bryan's jaw, was Bogash's winning wallop. The Bridgeport man occasionally called his right into play, but he really didn't require the assistance of this member as the left was effective enough to win.

Downey Foolishly Relied on His Right to Win

Downey foolishly relied almost entirely upon his right to win. He starts this punch somewhere in the vicinity of the canvas and it's 100 to 1 that it won't land. Bryan has a fairly good left, but he unwisely decided not to use it a great deal.

Downey's right would be very effective if he only had to employ it against a punching bag. It is a different story when you have a moving opponent, especially when the opponent can hit.

In the ninth round, Downey counted with his famous right. It landed high on Bogash's jaw and Lou was in distress for a minute. This was the nearest that Downey came to winning during the mill.

We picked Bogash to win on the strength of his aggressiveness and figured he would be able to keep inside of the wild Downey sock. And that's just what happened.

Bogash Whangs Over Right to the Jaw

There was not a great deal of clean scoring in the first round. Bogash whanged over a right to the jaw and a left hook to the body. The right closed Downey's left eye which was pretty good for a starter. Lou also cashed in on some lusty body punches. It was Bogash's round.

The second frame was jammed full of action. During a torrid exchange, Bogash crashed a left hook to the jaw. Downey went to the canvas in a heap, but regained his feet like a flash. Lou tried hard to put over the kayo and counted heavily to the head and body. During the exchange Downey slipped and went to the canvas again. He got up immediately. The Columbus warrior was in distress at the bell.

There was not much action in the third chapter. Bogash managed to take the honors.

Started the Fourth as if He Meant Business

Downey started the fourth frame as if he meant business. He clouted a right to the jaw. This awakened Bogash to new action. He sailed in close and whanged away merrily for the head and body. One left hook to the jaw turned Downey around. Downey started swinging with his right and missed enough punches to knock out the entire middleweight division.

Bogash took it easy in the fifth and did not have any trouble outpointing Downey, who was still resting his all on his right.

Downey continued to miss right-hand swings in the sixth frame, while Bogash kept in close where he counted effectively to the head and body with short, damaging wallops.

Bogash Whirls Downey Around With Left Hook

A Bogash left hook made Downey whirl around in the seventh round. Lou kept right on scoring and had the session by a comfortable margin. The eight also saw Lou out front.

The Downey rooters had something to cheer about in the ninth round. The Jimmy Dunn entry sent over a right to the jaw which shook Bogash up. It was fully a minute before Lou was himself. Meanwhile, Downey kept piling up points. Bogash made a spurt late in the round, but the margin was in Downey's favor.

Bogash's infighting gave him the edge in the tenth.

Jack Conway Picks Four Winners at Arena Show

Jack said Lou Bogash would conquer Bryan Downey. And, of course, Lou did.

He also handed out the tip that Steve Guelin would wallop Jimmy McDonough. And it came to pass.

Jack told the world that Tommy Nee was too classy for Dody O'Neil. And he was.

He also slipped the fans the information that Tommy Lynch of New York, who had never shown in New England, was the real goods as a fighter and that he would win over Frankie Ryan. And the dope scored again.

Will Jack do as well on his next 100 selections?

He opens fire by picking Charley Parker to defeat Johnny Downes and Billy Woods to win over Shaver O'Brien at the Armory A. A.'s show at the Grand Opera House tonight.

CALZA GETS BIG TEST IN BOUT AT ARENA

George Calza, Italian heavyweight wrestling champion, will be battling with his back against the wall when he clashes with Cliff Binckley of California in one of the finish wrestling matches at the big show to be staged by the Old Howard management at the Boston Arena tomorrow night.

It will be the first time in many months that Calza has met such a severe grappling test. Binckley is one of the leading wrestlers in this country and he figures he will not have a great deal of difficulty in disposing of the Italian. He admits that Calza is young and strong, but he contends that the Italian lacks the class that goes with a champion.

Binckley recently made a sensational showing against Strangler Lewis. He scored the first fall. The champion then secured a fall. He tossed Binckley to the mat with so much violence that the Californian was obliged to withdraw from the contest.

Calza will have to display all of his ability or else receive a crushing defeat.

Another finish match will find Strangler Lewis pitted against George Kotsonaros. Greek champion, Kotsonaros has won seven straight matches and figures he will prove too much for the champion. He's willing to admit that Lewis is a mighty grappler, but he points to the fact the Strangler has been tossed for falls in a number of his recent matches.

Kotsonaros is built much along the same lines as Jack Dempsey. He is in splendid condition and declares he will carry the ball to Lewis from the start tomorrow night.

Another finish match will find Joe Perelli, Italian wildman, battling with Charley Metro, Albanian tiger.

There is a tremendous demand for reservations as it is the best wrestling offering of the year. The Arena is ure to be jammed to capacity.

PARKER AND DOWNES TOP CLASSY BILL

By RINGSIDE.

Two feature bouts at the Armory A. A.'s show at the Grand Opera House tonight will make you forget all about the high cost of turkey and such things.

Charley Parker

Charley Parker, who bends 'em with right hand punches to the chin, will have South Boston Johnny Downes as an opponent in the final bout of ten frames.

Another ten-session affair will find Shaver O'Brien, another South Boston hero, battling with Billy Woods of Medford.

You may say it with flowers or with your favorite fruit, but you must admit that these two mills will furnish an abundance of action.

Since the Armory A. A. tied the tin can on to our prima donna type of fighter it has been very successful. Local boys furnish action. They also have followings which help to roll the money into the box office. And 'tis said that even a boxing club gets weary when the gate receipts are low.

It will be the first ring meeting between Parker and Downes. This appears rather strange when one takes into consideration that the boys battled in the amateurs about the same time and that they turned pro together. The promoters have tried hard enough to bill this pair, but the rivalry between the boxers has been so intense that each proposed match ran for Sweeney.

Then Alex McLean of the Triple A threw himself into the picture and made the big booking.

Shaver O'Brien Is Fit for Rugged Tussle

Shaver O'Brien is in splendid condition for his ten-round whirl with Billy Woods. The latter is a stiff puncher and aggressive. With Shaver right, the fans should witness a lively mill.

There will also be a couple of eights. Mike Mandot of Cambridge will toss punches at Mickey Carson Quincy welterweight, while Al Lewis of the South End and Kid Philpott of Newton, gay lightweights, will try to settle their ring differences.

THREE FEATURE FOOTBALL GAMES ON CARD FOR BOSTON FANS

TWOAT THE BALL PARKS THIRD AT MEDFORD

By CHARLES E. PARKER.

King Football pays another neat compliment to Greater Boston this week

Within a robust stone's throw of the State House there will be staged on Saturday afternoon clashes between Dartmouth and Brown; Boston College and Georgetown, and Boston University and Tufts, and as each of the contesting teams is on the upgrade, football as is football should entertain those who gather at Braves Field, Fenway Park or Tufts oval.

Of course the largest football throng of the year and the greatest general interest will centre in the meeting of those two great traditional rivals, Harvard and Yale, which meeting takes place in the Yale bowl. But whether the 80,000, who will make New Haven their week-end stopping place, will see as fine a brand of football as will develop on local fields is very much a question

Neither Harvard nor Yale has played impressive football in recent games except when they were opposed by soft foes. Yale, it is true, has the greatest potential strength in the East if not in the entire U. S. A. while Harvard has the most widely advertised system of football play.

But Yale has made ill use of its material to date while the Harvard material has fallen below early expectations, and the Harvard system no longer worries intelligent opponents.

Consequently, what will happen at the Yale Bowl is a profound mystery, but few are anticipating a really thrilling game.

Yale Fit While Harvard Complains of Ills

Finding a Yale team physically fit on the eve of the Harvard arrayed complaining of its ills and injuries, establishes a precedent in Harvard-Yale football relations. But such is the case this year.

In Yale's palmiest days, when it was rolling up large margined wins over the crimson, the advance dope always had all the Eli stars aching slowly but surely to the danger list in New Haven hospitals, while Harvard was rejoicing at the excellent condition of its football players.

Now come stories from New Haven that Mallory, O'Hearn and all other semi-cripples are in top form, while from Cambridge come reports that "Tubby" Grew, Charley Buell, "Heinie" Dunker, Charley Eastman and several others will be lucky if they can struggle to the Harvard bench to watch the game.

Will Take Brainier Work to Win From Harvard

However, Yale's physical condition would not win against the Tigers, and it will take a brainier exhibition than Yale delivered last week to whip a crippled Harvard eleven.

The local game which will draw the greatest attendance will be the Dartmouth-Brown conflict at Fenway Park. Both institutions have strong local following hereabout, and Brown's triumph over Harvard has made its followers and the football public forget its defeat by Yale, while Dartmouth's comeback against Colgate and its recent showing against Harvard, has compensated somewhat for the licking it received from Cornell.

Both Brown and Dartmouth have proved excellent defensive teams, but have yet to show an attack when opposed by strong opponents, and the meeting of two such teams, each playing its best game and ready to take all sorts of chances when a score appears in the offing, should be productive of plenty of thrills.

Two of the Greatest Tackles Will Face Each Other

Two of the greatest tackles of the current season will face each other in this game—Mike Gullian of Brown and "Pudge" Neidlinger of Dartmouth. Each, in appearing against Harvard has won unstinted praise from every onlooker. Neidlinger, in confronting and stopping Harvard's regular backfield, probably had the tougher job at the Stadium, but Gullian's work against slightly easier opposition showed him to be equally effective as a defensive man and somewhat more effective as an offensive player. On their work on the same field Saturday may depend their selection to the All America teams which soon will appear.

Not a whit behind the Brown Dartmouth game in attractive promise is the Boston College-Georgetown game at Braves Field. It is the Maroon's second engagement in the Jesuit College championship and the local school must annex the game if it is to enter the coming Holy Cross contest with an equal chance of gaining the title, for Holy Cross in defeating Georgetown three weeks ago and whipping Fordham last Saturday is at the top of the heap with two victories, B. C is second with one win and no defeats; Georgetown third, with one victory and one defeat, and Fordham last with three lickings and no wins on its record.

Georgetown Started Season Like a Champion

Georgetown, with excellent material, started the season like a champion, but stumbled on three successive Saturdays, losing in turn to the Quantico Marine team, Holy Cross and Georgia Tech. However, it defeated the strong Bucknell team last week, and has been primed especially for the Braves Field game Saturday.

B. C., after suffering in its Detroit and Lafayette games by close scores, has been playing as excellent a brand of football as any team in this section and has its full complement of regulars intact for the approaching game.

But despite the promise of the Fenway Park and Braves Field games, neither will have anything on the B. U.—Tufts game at Medford, in the bitter rivalry that exists between the contesting teams.

Tufts Anxious to Pin Defeat on Intown Team

The game between this pair last year was one of the most stirring clashes of the entire season. Charles Whelan, the B. U. mentor, formerly served in that capacity at Tufts, and because he deserted the Medfordians they are always anxious to remind him of their feelings on the subject, and they figure pinning defeats upon his present charges is the one best way.

Eddie Casey, being a loyal Harvard man, but now head coach at Tufts, remembers a little stunt Whelan put over on the Crimson with one of his Tufts elevens—that 6 to 3 defeat of Harvard before the war, and he will not hesitate a moment to use a Harvard-coached Tufts eleven to repay the B. U. instructor for that.

The three Greater Boston games; that at Yale, at New Haven, involving a Greater Boston eleven, and the annual Army-Navy engagement at Philadelphia appear to be the fea's whereon on this week's Eastern football program, which, by the way, is a much thinner program than it one which have preceded it, for last Saturday found Princeton, Columbia, Colgate, Syracuse, Williams and many other strong seaboard elevens packing their uniforms away for the season.

Other Elevens Will Rest on Saturday for Thanksgiving

Other strong elevens, includ ng Cornell, Pennsylvania, Penn State, Pittsburgh and Vermont will rest up on Saturday for their Thanksgiving game, one week from Thursday. Then, except for the B. C.-H. C. game one week from Saturday, the season in this section will be at an end.

Several teams with Thanksgiving Day engagements, however, will play on Saturday. Included in this list is West Virginia, one of the three undefeated teams th's season, and Washington & Jefferson, another strong outfit.

The Mountaineers, coached by "Cutie" Spears, former Dartmouth head coach, play Ohio University on Saturday, while the Presidents engage Detroit, and on Thanksgiv ng W. & J. and W. Va., clash in their big annual. Detroit, by the way, after meeting W. & J. Saturday, will face Tom Keady's Vermont array Thanksgiving Day.

KELLEHER SAVED FOR GEORGETOWN GAME

How easily a team can demoralize its opponents by a radical shift in its style of play was clearly demonstrated by Caninius in the game with Boston College. With the Eagle leading by 13 points, and perhaps a little too confident that victory was firmly clutched, the Buffalo eleven uncovered a baffling attack that was rendered more dangerous by its recklessness.

In one way the score Luke Urban's men threw into the Eagle camp in the last quarter of the game was just what was needed to knock the Maroon and Gold players out of a perilous mental state before the big game with Georgetown next Saturday

Coach Cavanaugh studied the Eagle's weakness carefully and yesterday pointed out valuable lessons to his men. This week he will take good care to prepare the Maroon and Gold team against a repetition of what may be termed a moral collapse in the contest with the Capitolians

Last Fall the Eagle team led Georgetown in the first half, but its defense crumbled in the last half and the Blue and Gray eleven snatched victory from Boston winning by a 14 to 10 score. This year, Boston must face a team every bit as strong as was the Georgetown eleven of last year, and the Eagle cannot afford to make any mistakes or let up in the fight for an instant if it hopes to make Saturday's game a stepping stone to the Eastern Catholic College championship

Georgetown Has a Triple Threat in Flavin, Halfback

It seems that no team worth mentioning lacks what has been termed a "triple threat." Boston, of course, has its famous Darling, who because of his exceptional running, kicking and passing ability justly merits the epithet. Georgetown, too, has one of them. He is Flavin, the Blue and Gray right halfback. This Senator is no mere pretender to the title of backfield omnipotence. As a punter, he is more Darling's equal than any who have so far engaged in a punting duel with the Minnesota blond. His average boot is 40 yards, with a distance of fifty yards, and the Eagle is likely to have the advantage, it enjoyed all season in the kicking game, nullified i nSaturday's game by Georgetown s t. t

Flavin hits the line like a cop smashing down a door If he doesn't break through the first time, he just hits the line again He is a great runner when he starts an end run, and Cumerford and O'Connell have an afternoon's work ahead of them in watching Flavin alone.

With such a man as Flavin pitted against Darling, the crowd should have plenty to thrill them on Saturday Darlinghas never failed to kick his teammates out of the danger zone when the Eagle backs could not gain through the line. He is cool and deliberate in getting off his long punts, and chooses the place where the ball will fall that will give the Eagle ends ample time to reach.

When carrying the ball, Darling is about as easy to stop as a street car on a rainy day. He shakes off potential tacklers as a dog tosses a rag doll. Capable line-plunger and a speedy runner, he will give Flavin a lively battle for the sole right to the title of "triple threat."

Captain Bill Kelleher has been saved for the Georgetown game, and his return to the Eagle backfield will make it much speadier Kelleher is a great defensive back, and has a keen faculty for doping impending plays.

HOPPE TO PLAY SCHAEFER TONIGHT

New York Nov. 21.—Willie Hoppe scored h s fourth victory in as many games by defeating Erich Hagenlacher, German champion, 500 to 462, in the 18.2 world titular balking tournament.

The worst that can befall him now is a tie and another playoff with either Schaefer, the playing through champion, or Edouard Horemans of Belgium, European champion.

Hoppe played his worst game in many years against Hagenlacher, who failed to win any of his five games. He seemingly suffered from cue paralysis More by good luck than good management of the ivory spheres did he succeed in winning a raggedly-played affair that went 22 innings.

There was no solidity to Hoppe's runs. He tallied 117, 92 and 90 as his best, and his fourth best was 47 and the next 25. It took him 11 in nings to turn the first 100 mark on his string

Jake Schaefer defeated Welker Cochran of California, 500 to 303

If Schaefer beats Hoppe tonight it will be a deadlock, each having won four and lost one game.

A victory for Hoppe will give him the world championship, which he held for years until he lost it to Schaefer last season in a playoff at the end of the international competition.

There is also a chance for a three-cornered tie. If Edouard Horemans, of Belgium, champion of Europe, defeats Roger Conti, French champion, in his final match this afternoon, and Schaefer wins at night, all three will be tied with four victories and one defeat each.

The Horemans-Conti match, besides having an important bearing on the tourney result, will determine the championship of Europe, as both have defeated Hagenlacher, the German champion.

KICK IN

Christmas time—the merry holiday season—is almost upon us.

The spirit of Peace on Earth, Good Will to Men—is in the air and for the most of us these are the happiest days of the entire year.

But—for hundreds of others—maybe your very next door neighbor—Christmas means only added misery, suffering and sadness.

We are making our annual appeal to the sporting fraternity to help out—KICK IN—and relieve some of the suffering of the less fortunate—and make it a real Christmas for everybody.

The time is short and we must work fast.

Every little bit helps, so get busy.

Send your contribution to the Boston American Xmas Sport Fund.

Do it today—don't delay.

KICK IN.

WAITING FOR SPRING

By NICK FLATLEY.

CHRISTMAS SPIRIT.

GIVE until it hurts your basketroll and do your soul good. That's the motto we want you to adopt, when you read of the Boston American Christmas Basket Fund. The sport fans have always contributed gloriously to the greatest of Boston charities. They have never refused the appeal.

This year, those who live down in the shadow of poverty need your assistance as they never did before. The relentless prices of coal make the prospect of the long Winter more dreary and bleaker than ever. Your gift a year ago helped bring the joy and spirit of Christmas to some 50,000 hungry humans. Give until it hurts and help twice that many this Winter.

You don't hesitate to spend five or ten dollars to see a fight or a football game. Why hesitate to spend that much at least sending happiness where sorrow and despondency stalk? It will give you more pleasure and do you more good than all the fights and football games ever staged. Try it and see.

SOME COACH, ROPER.

PRINCETON will lose six football regulars by graduation. But Princeton should worry about that.

The team started off this season with only two athletes who could claim any regular spot on the '21 eleven. But a glance along the backfrail will show the shattered remnants of many a sturdy Tiger opponent.

Bill Roper has something as a coach. He can make his teams play hard football, and fight best when most sorely pressed. And if that isn't the answer to a great coaching, roll one yourself.

Poor old Yale has every right in the world to be discouraged and shot for Saturday's large emboigio. One of the best potential teams that ever cleaved the turf of New Haven, it was licked by an eleven that had it beaten only in the ability to put over the punch when it was needed.

• • •

It cannot be the fault of the players. They have the heart and the desire to win, and all the physical and technical requisites therefor. Twould seem the Blue still needs a different coaching system.

A MONTH FROM TODAY.

You could tell a fighter in the old days by his bent-in nose and crooknd pan. Now you can't tell 'em anything.

A SAPP'S FABLES.

ONCE there was a chap who read about sets. Christmas Basket Fund. He had been on the rocks himself, and knew what it meant to go without meals, and sleep in damp, fireless rooms, and wonder just how soon starvation would reach out and grab him. He knew how tough it was on the kids not jo have any real Christmas. So he sat down, wrote out a check for a week's pay, and sent it along.

Frothingham Phibbs Gives Valuable Comments on Experts

By Nat N. Dorfman

THERE'S one thing on earth worse than an income tax collector, if that is possible," began Frothingham Phibbs gloomily as he stepped into the house.

"And what is that?" asked Amanda, who could discern her spouse was as fretful as a spoiled child.

"An efficiency expert," he answered with asperity. "Most people fill a niche in this fair world of ours, but the only thing I've ever seen one of those guys fill is the office with misery and their pockets with a fat salary."

"What a happened at the office, my dear?" asked the much concerned missus. "Has that horrid Mr. Baker troubled you again?"

"Troubled me?" demanded Phibbs. "I should say he has. He wants me to keep my department within a certain salary limit, and it can't be done unless I fire half the staff and cut my salary twenty-five per cent in the bargain. He's the efficiency expert, but I'm the poor fish!"

"Never mind," Amanda tried to console; "perhaps you can get along with only half the staff, but I know you simply can't get along with a twenty five per cent cut in your wages!"

"There you go," cried the irate Frothy, "thinking only of yourself. How about the poor fellows who are about to lose their jobs?"

"Maybe they'll find ones in place of this where there is no efficiency in the office."

"I hope so. Efficiency sure is the bunk. They say these so-called experts $10,000 a year and save the firm just enough to pay their salaries. And by the time the boss finds it out he probably needs a salvage expert."

"I don't suppose the efficiency experts are very popular then," interjected the missus, for something better to say.

"Popular?" mocked Mr. Phibbs. "Ha! ha! They're about as popular as a Chinaman with the hives in a front seat of the Golden Horseshoe at the opera! An efficiency expert is next to an undertaker as a crepe hanger. They have their uses in the world, but nobody has discovered what they are! And bee dee those birds seem to think you can run a department strictly to the penny. It can't be done any more than you can make a blue law agitator do the shimmy—when nobody is watching!"

The evening meal passed in a lighter vein as Frothingham dug deep into the sporting page and found solace in the fact that the snort ng experts, as usual, were wrong.

"I hate to interrupt you," commenced Amanda, "but I'm afraid I'll be short again this week, so you better give me ten dollars to meet running expenses."

Frothy looked up plainly annoyed.

"What, again?" he asked, his face screwed up into a question mark. "I thought I installed a budget system here last week? Isn't there any efficiency in the conducting of this household?"

"Efficiency?" the missus asked quite innocently, like a chorus girl. "I thought you just said that efficiency is the bunk and that nobody can run a department exactly to the penny?"

"Don't take me too seriously," Mr. Phibbs responded, digging his head into the paper again.

"I don't!" laughed Amanda, as she extracted a brand new ten-dollar bill from her husband's wallet that reposed in his coat that hung on the rack, and she marched out singing lightly to herself.

ONCE OVERS

(Copyright, 1922, by International Feature Service, Inc.)

WIFE, ARE YOU A HELP OR HINDRANCE?

There is nothing more discouraging to a husband who is doing his best than to have a wife complaining that if he were the right kind of a man he might be making as much money as Mrs. So and So's husband.

Some men are money makers, and some are not.

There are men who can conduct a business and there are others who make better employes.

The employes who cannot aspire to a business of their own are unfortunate, and the family shares in the depressing realization, but if a man is unsuited to be a successful business manager, which would bring him a better income, a nagging wife will not help the matter.

Nagging may put him to the bad so that he cannot hold even a good position.

If a man feels that he cannot conduct a business, he would better not put his savings into something he doubts from the start.

It is far better for a wife to assist such a man and encourage him in making as large savings as possible from his wages, rather than advise him to invest his money, his hard earned savings, in a business venture in which he feels he will be unsuccessful before he engages in it.

Medbury Says One Farmer Got Egg Noggs by Feeding Cows Moonshine

A FARMER from Birmingham, Alabama, reports that several of his cows ate some "corn mash" the other day and became intoxicated. As soon as the towns people heard this they were more than anxious to buy their milk from him.

INSTEAD of getting seventeen or eighteen cents, they were giving him three and four dollars a quart for it.

HE changed the labels on the milk bottles to read "Bottled in Barn."

IT'S pretty nice when you own a lot of cows that give egg nogs

IF they hadn't been cows, the prohibition officers would have arrested the farmer for running a blind pig

ONE citizen wanted him put in jail for obtaining money under false pretenses. The dairy man was selling him milk when he thought he would be getting something else.

BUT the police couldn't arrest a farmer for not diluting his milk

SOMEBODY must have whispered in the cows' ear that Volstead was in town because they all went dry.

THE milk had a great kick in it as long as the cows ate the corn mash. One two-year-old baby drank a nursing bottle full of it and then told his father where to head in.

THE cows had a great time too. One of them felt so good that he actually tried to jump over the moon.

THE milk got to contain a lot of alcohol and the farmer was so conscientious that he wouldn't sell any of it to you without you had a prescription

THE cows were eating so many hops that they began giving malted milk

THEY got so that when they came home to be milked they staggered so much that the farmer had to widen the cowpaths.

IT was getting so that the farmer had to wait up nights for his cows to come home.

PEOPLE would go to the dairy and buy a glass of milk and ask the hired man to put cracked ice in it.

IT got so that they were afraid to drink a glass of it without shutting the barn door.

INSTEAD of retailers having the milk delivered to them in cans, they were ordering it by the case

NOW that the bovines have had a taste of moonshine, even the cows are expected to go to the polls at next election and vote "wet."

ISOTHERMO-BATHIC

By C. St. L. Malloy

THESE are the days of the expert. An expert in a guy that knows more about one thing only than all the rest of the world knows about everything there is to know anything about.

An expert knows exactly how to do one thing, only—and then does it wrong.

There are experts in biology, mythology, entology, physiology, psychology, theology, etymology, conchology, geology—and in all simple and compound fractions.

When your neglected kettle boils over you call in a thermal expert, and after he figures out the number of calories in a lump of coal he tells you that you must have applied too much heat to the bottom of the kettle.

Why does it rain? The natural answer would be there is so much water in the atmosphere that it overflows on your bean—always when you have left your umbrella home or forgotten the one you picked up in a restaurant. But is it so? Not at all. Drop into the Weather Bureau and consult an expert.

He'll show you a bunch of lines that run from the Mexican border to the Arctic. He invites you to take a look at the isothermal line. You do. Then he springs the ISOTHERMOBATHIC line. You don't know whether it's going or coming or both. Then you timidly inquire. And he says, "Why, old man, it's this way: that L 'a line through those points were equal amounts of rain fall—used also attributively."

I have used the old clothes line on the neighbor's dog, when he strayed in from the back yard to grab a bone that I had paid $2.50 for as a perfectly good piece of porterhouse steak. But I can cross my heart that I have never used, disused, abused, misused a real ISOTHERMOBATHIC line in an ATTRIBUTIVE way. That is one of the things I don't do. Do you?

On my first trip to Boston I boarded at South Braintree what I supposed was a train going to Quincy. Imagine how I felt when the conductor said, "Do you know where this train goes?" I replied in the negative. He then said, "Why, my dear girl, this is an express train to Boston." There I was without a cent—my pocketbook and all being in Quincy, also my family there, too, waiting for me to come so they could start driving back to Maine. I arrived at the South Station without even a nickel for a telephone call.

Brandon and Princess Mary start forth to take the ship for New Spain

World-Famous Story of the All-Conquering Power of Love Over the Heart of the Wilful and Beautiful Sister of the Autocratic King Henry VIII.

By Charles Major

A FEW days after Brandon's departure, Mary, with the king's consent, organized a small party to go over to Windsor for a few weeks during the warm weather.

There were ten or twelve of us, including two chaperons, the old Earl of Hertford and the dowager Duchess of Kent. Henry might as well have sent along a pair of spaniels to act as chaperons—it would have taken an army to guard Mary alone—and to tell the truth our old chaperons needed watching more than any of us. It was scandalous. Each of them had a touch of gout, and when they made wry faces it was a standing inquiry among us whether they were leering at each other or felt a twinge—whether it was their feet or their hearts, that troubled them.

Mary led them a pretty life at all times, even at home in the palace, and I know they would rather have gone off with a pack of imps than with us. The inducement was that it gave them butter opportunities to be together—an arrangement connived at by the queen, I think—and they were satisfied. The earl had a wife, but he fancied the old dowager, and she fancied him, and probably the wife fancied somebody else, so they were all happy. It greatly amused the young people, you may be sure, and Mary said, probably without telling the exact truth, that every night she prayed God to pity and forgive their silliness. One day the princess said she was becoming alarmed, their silliness was so intense she feared it might be contagious and spread. Then, with a most comical seriousness, she added:

"Mon Dieu! Sir Edwin, what if I should catch it? Master Charles would not take me"

"No danger of that, my lady; he is too devoted to see anything but beauty in you, no matter how much you might change."

"Do you really think so? He says so little about it that sometimes I almost doubt."

Therein she spoke the secret of Brandon's success with her, at least in the beginning; for there is wonderful potency in the stimulus of a healthy little doubt.

We had a delightful canter over to Windsor, I riding with Mary most of the way. I was not averse to this arrangement, as I not only relished Mary's mirth and joyousness, which was at its height, but hoped I might give my little Lady Jane a twinge or two of jealousy perchance to fortilize her sentiments toward me.

Mary talked, and laughed, and sang, for her soul was a fountain of kindness that bubbled up the instant pressure was removed. She spoke of little but our last trip over this same road, and, as we passed objects on the way, told men of what Brandon had said at this place and that. She laughed and dimpled exquisitely in relating how she had deliberately made opportunities for him to flatter her, until, at last, he smiled in her face and told her she was the most beautiful creature living, but that "after all, beauty was as beauty did."

"That made me angry," said she. "I pouted for a while, and, two or three times, was on the point of dismissing him, but thought better of it and asked him plainly wherein I did so much amiss. Then what do you think the impudent fellow said?"

"I cannot guess."

"He said: 'Oh, there is so much it would take a lifetime to tell it.'

"This made me furious, but I could not answer, and a moment later he said: 'Nevertheless I should be only too glad to undertake the task.

"The thought never occurred to either of us then that he would be taken at his word. Bold? I should think he was; I never saw anything like it! I have not told you a tenth part of what he said to me that day; he said anything he wished, and it seemed that I could neither stop him nor restrain. Half the time I was angry and half the time amused, but by the time we reached Windsor there never was a girl more hopelessly and desperately in love than Mary Tudor." And she laughed as if it were a huge joke on Mary.

She continued: "That day settled matters with me for all time. I don't know how he did it. Yes I do ...," and she launched forth into an account of Brandon's perfections, which I found somewhat dull, and so would you.

We remained a day or two at Windsor, and then, over the objections of our chaperons, moved on to to Berkeley Castle, where Margaret of Scotland was spending her summer.

We had another beautiful ride up the dear old Thames to Berkeley but Mary had grown serious and saw none of it.

On the afternoon of the appointed day, the princess suggested a hawking party, and we set out in the direction of the rendezvous. Our party consisted of myself, three other gentlemen and three ladies besides Mary. Jane did not go; I was afraid to trust her. She were, and, with difficulty, forced herself to say something about a headache, but the rest of the inmates of the castle of course had no thought that possibly they were taking their last look upon Mary Tudor.

Think what you will of the girl we were running away with! What reckless fools we were not to have seen the utter hopelessness, certain failure, and deadly peril of our act; treason black as Plutonian midnight. But Providence seems to have an especial care for fools, while wise men are left to care for themselves, and it does look as if safety lies in folly.

We rode on and on, and although I took two occasions, in the presence of others, to urge Mary to return, owing to the approach of night and threatened rain, she took her own head, as everybody knew she always would, and continued the hunt.

Just before dark, as we neared the rendesvous, Mary and I managed to ride ahead of the party quite a distance. At last we saw a heron rise, and the princess uncapped her hawk.

"This is my chance," she said; "I will run away from you now and lose myself; keep them off my track for five minutes and I shall be safe. Good-bye, Edwin; you and Jane are the only persons I regret to leave. I love you as my brother and sister. When we are settled in New Spain we will have you both come to us. Now, Edwin, I shall tell you something; don't let Jane put you off any longer. She loves you; she told me so. There! Good-bye, my friend; kiss her a thousand times for me." And she flew her bird and galloped after it at headlong speed.

As I saw the beautiful young form receding from me, perhaps forever, the tears stood in my eyes, while I thought of the strong heart that so unfalteringly braved dangers and was so loyal to itself and daring for its love. She had shown a little feverish excitement for a day or two, but it was the fever of anticipation, not of fear or hesitancy.

Soon the princess was out of sight, and I waited for the others to overtake me. When they came up I was greeted in chorus: "Where is the princess?" I said she had gone off with her hawk, and had left me to bring them after her. I held them talking while I could, and when we started to follow took up the wrong scent. A short ride made this apparent, when I came in for my full share of abuse and ridicule, for I had led them against their judgment. I was credited with being a blockhead, when in fact they were the dupes.

We rode hurriedly back to the point of Mary's departure and wound our horns lustily, but my object had been accomplished, and I knew that within twenty minutes from the time I last saw her, she would be with Brandon, on the road to Bristol, gaining on any pursuit we could make at the rate of three miles for two. We scoured the forest far and near, but of course found no trace. After a time rain set in and one of the gentlemen escorted the ladies home, while three of us remained to prowl about the woods and roads all night in a soaking drizzle. The task was tiresome enough for me, as it lacked motive; and when we rode into Berkeley Castle next day, a sorrier set of bedraggled, rain-stained, mud-covered knights you never saw. You may know the castle was wild with excitement. There were all sorts of conjectures, but soon we unanimously concluded it had been the work of highwaymen, of whom the country was full, and by whom the princess had certainly been abducted.

The chaperons forgot their gout and each other, and Jane, who was the most affected of all, had a genuine excuse for giving vent to her grief and went to bed—by far the safest place for her.

What was to be done? First we sent a message to the king, who would probably have us all flayed alive—a fear which the chaperons shared to the fullest extent. Next, an armed party rode back to look again for Mary, and, if possible, rescue her.

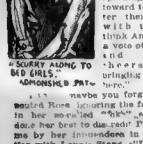
WHEN A GIRL MARRIES

By Ann Lisle

"AND I say that Ralph Lacey is my idea of 100 per cent. American manhood," asserted Virginia, blowing a kiss in the general direction in which the two guests were speeding back toward town after their visit with us. "I think Anne gets a vote of thanks and three cheers for bringing them here."



"SCURRY ALONG TO BED GIRLS," ADMONISHED PAT.

"Why, maybe you forget me," pouted Rosa, ignoring the fact that in her so-called "styles" she had done her best to discredit Park and me by her impudences in connection with Lennie Stone. "I am the one who introduced to this house Wayn Parkinson, Third. He is as our Pat says, thoroughbred. But I am surprised that our dear Jeanie is—how you say—taken in by the flatterings of a person like that Lacy."

"Scurry along to bed, girls," admonished Pat, sensing a storm in the offing. "Those are two fine Lake Park is to the manor born, and so our guest's aristocratic lahnings will be toward him. But I'm thinking that my democratic Jeanie likes the man who makes himself into a fine upstanding gossoon Lacy's after being. And you're both right, so off with you and dream about nothing more substantial than angel cake and whipped cream."

We all laughed, but Virginia and I were amused more than Rosa could dream at the idea of Harrison's natural leanings being toward a self-made man. We hurried up stairs, parting with a friendly good night. But by the time I arrived at the hair-brushing stage there was a quick tap on my door and hard upon her summons Rosa strolled into the room.

"You brush, also, the hair," she said, tossing back a mane of curly black locks and flinging up the sleeves of a magnificently embroidered crimson gown to show a brush of ivory installed in gold. "I think may be it is pleasant we shall together, like two girls, talk over the so jolly evening."

What I Have Learned in 47 Years Practice

From a recent portrait of DR. W. B. CALDWELL Born Shelbyville, Mo., 1850

I HAVE been watching the results of constipation for 47 years, since I began the practice of medicine back in 1875. I am now 83 years old, and though from time to time the medical profession makes some wonderfully interesting experiments and tests, the fundamentals of causes and relief in this particular ailment are unchanged.

But the people take greater interest today in their health, in diet, exercise and the drinking of water. Constipation, however, will occur from time to time no matter how one tries to avoid it. Of next importance, then, is how to treat it when it comes. I believe in getting as close to nature as possible, hence my remedy for constipation, known as Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, is a mild vegetable compound. It is made of Egyptian senna and pepsin with agreeable aromatics. Children will not willingly take bitter things. Syrup Pepsin is pleasant-tasting, and youngsters love it. It does not gripe. Thousands of mothers have written me to that effect.

Over 10 million bottles of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin are now sold every year, and it is the most widely bought family laxative in the world. I say family laxative because all in the family can use it with safety. It is mild enough for the infant in arms, effective in the most chronic constipation of an adult. The formula is on every package.

Recently there has been a new wave of drastic physics. Calomel, a mercurial that salivates and loosens teeth, has been revived; salt waters and powders that draw needed constituents from the blood; coal tar disguised in candy form that causes skin eruptions. In a practice of 47 years I have never seen any reason for their use when a medicine like Syrup Pepsin will empty the bowels just as promptly, more cleanly and gently, without griping, and without shock to the system.

Keep free from constipation! It lowers your strength 25 per cent, hardens the arteries and brings on premature old age. Do not let a day go by without a bowel movement. Do not sit and hope but go to a druggist and get a bottle of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. It is a generous-size bottle. Take a teaspoonful that night and by morning you will be well. The cost is only about a cent a dose. Use Syrup Pepsin for yourself and members of the family in constipation, biliousness, sour and crampy stomach, pales, indigestion, loss of appetite or sleep, and to break up fevers and colds. Always have a bottle in the house, and observe these three rules of health: Keep the head cool, the feet warm, the bowels open.

I REPEAT MY FREE OFFER

$10,000 worth of full bottles of Syrup Pepsin free

Last year I agreed to spend $10,000 worth for advertising in my Syrup Pepsin, and now, there from one bottle to sell the rest who asked. A tremendous trial was the result. But there must be many who did not write. I would like to have them try Syrup Pepsin, too. So I now renew my offer, in consideration of approaching 84th birthday, and will give $10,000 worth of full bottles free. Simply send your name and address to Dr. W. B. KIMONO, By JOHN PARIS

Great Exposure of How Japanese Treat Their Women

SUPPRESSED BY JAPANESE GOVERNMENT

This startling and intensely interesting story of the Cherry Blossom Kingdom, telling what the Japanese think of women, was suppressed by the Japanese government. The expose has stunned Europe and opened the eyes of the world to what has really been going on. John Paris, the author, was an English diplomat there for years.

THE CHARACTERS IN THE STORY:

THE HONORABLE GEOFFREY BARRINGTON, son of Lord Brandan, a Captain in the British Army, resigns his commission when he weds

ASAKO FUJINAMI, heiress, daughter of Japanese parents who are dead; brought up and educated in French convent schools and introduced to London society by

LADY EVERINGTON, a brilliant matchmaker, who did not foresee the result of the bringing together of the two. At the reception toasts are drunk to the closer union of Britain and Japan, but both British and Japanese diplomats in the distinguished company evade the suggestion that the couple visit Japan, as appears to be their desire. Some of the reception guests frankly question the wisdom of the marriage and doubt the possibility of a happy life for the pair. Lady Everington, in her anxiety for the young Captain, who has been her special protege, interviews

COUNT SAITO, the Japanese Ambassador, who tells her the Fujinamis belong to the nouveaux riches of Japan, but gives little information of their origin or the source of their wealth. A visit to his wife's guardians, the Muratas, a Japanese family living in Paris, and a sojourn among the cosmopolitans of Deauville, sharpen the desire to see Japan. Aboard the ship they meet

VISCOUNT KAMIMURA, returning home to wed a bride he has never seen. A stop at Nagasaki is the first sight of Japan. A part of the revelation is the Chonkina, or Geisha dance, seen by Barrington, who is shocked by the performance. He is disturbed to learn from the talk of Americans and Englishmen that marriages with Japanese women are not favorably regarded.

TANAKA, a nondescript Japanese, attaches himself to Barrington and accompanies him to Tokyo, where Geoffrey meets

REGGIE FORSYTH, attache to the British embassy, musical and romantic, who has just been transferred from Paris.

FAE SMITH, daughter of a Japanese mother and an English father, languishes around Reggie's apartment, where Barrington meets her.

SAITO, lawyer for the Fujinami estate, arranges for the Barringtons to meet the bride's family. Barrington is not impressed. A family conference discloses that the Fujinami income is derived from the Geisha house privileges in Tokyo and elsewhere. It is decided that Asako should be divorced and married to a Japanese.

Asako examines some of the treasures of the Fujinami family

"BUT where are the beds?" she asked.

Sadako went to the end of the balcony, and threw open a big cupboard concealed in the outside of the house. It was full of layers of rugs, thick, dark and wadded.

"These are the beds," smiled the Japanese cousin. "My brother Takeshi has a foreign bed in his room; but my father does not like them, or foreign clothes, or foreign food, or anything foreign. He says the Japanese things are best for the Japanese. But he is very old-fashioned."

"Japanese style looks nicer," said Asako, thinking how big and vulgar a bedstead would appear in that clean emptiness and how awkwardly its legs would trample on the straw matting; "but isn't it draughty and uncomfortable?"

Liked Foreign Beds

"I like the foreign beds best," said Sadako; "my brother has let me try his. It is very soft."

So in this country of Asako's fathers, a bedstead was lent for trial as though it had been some fascinating novelty, a bicycle, or a piano.

The kitchen appealed most to the visitor. It was the only room to her mind which had any individuality of its own. It was large, dark and high, full of servant-girls gossiping about like little mice, who bowed and then fled when the two ladies came in. The stoves for boiling the rice interested Asako, round iron receptacles like coppers, each resting on a brick fireplace.

Everything was explained to her; the high dressers hung with unfamiliar implements in white metal and white wood; the brightly labelled casks of sake and shoyu (sauce) waiting in the darkness like the deputation of a friendly society in its infancy at office; the silent jars of tea, greenish in color and ticketed with strange characters, the names of the respective tea-gardens; the iron kettle hanging on gibbet chains from the top of the ceiling over a charcoal fire sunk in the floor; the tasteful design of the commonest earthenware bowl; the little board and chopper for slicing the raw fish; the clean white rice-tubs with their brass bindings polished and shining; the odd shape and entirely Japanese character which distinguished the most ordinary things, and gave to the short squat knives a romantic air and to the broad wooden spoons a suggestion of witchcraft; finally, the little shrine to the Kitchen God, perched on a shelf close to the ceiling, looking like the facade of a doll's temple, and decorated with brass vases, dry grasses and strips of white paper.

The wide kitchen was impregnated with a smell already familiar to Asako's nose, one of the most typical odors of Japan, the smell of native cooking, humid, acrid and heavy like the smell of wood smoke from damp logs, with a sour and rotten flavor to it contributed by a kind of pickled horse-radish called Daikon or the Great Root, dear to the Japanese palate.

Dead Parents

The central ceremony of Asako's visit was her introduction to the memory of her dead parents. She was taken to a small room, where the alcove, the place of honor, was occupied by a closed cabinet, the butsudan (Buddha shelf), a beautiful piece of joiner's work in a kind of lattice pattern covered with red lacquer and gold. Sadako, approaching, reverently opened this shrine. The interior was all gilt with a dazzling gold like that used on old manuscripts. In the centre of this glory sat a golden-faced Buddha with dark blue hair and cloak, and an aureole of golden rays. Below him were arranged the ihai, the Tablets of the Dead, miniature gravestones about one foot high, with a black surface edged with gold upon which were inscribed the names of the dead persons, the new names given by the priests.

Sadako stepped back and clapped her hands together three times, repeating the formula of the Nichiren Sect of Buddhists.

"Namu myoho renge kyo! (Adoration to the Wonderful Law to the Lotus Scriptures)"

She instructed Asako to do the same.

"For," she said, "we believe that the spirits of the dead people are here; and we must be very good to them."

Deeply Moved

Asako did as she was told, wondering whether her confessor would give her penance for idolatry. Sadako then motioned her to sit on the floor. She took one of the tablets from its place and placed it in front of her cousin.

"That is your father's ihai," she said; and then removing another and placing it beside the first, she added:

"This is your mother."

Asako was deeply moved. In England we love our dead; but we consign them to the care of nature, to the change of the seasons, and the cold promiscuity of the graveyard. The Japanese dead never seem to leave the shelter of their home or the circle of their family. We bring to our dear ones flowers and prayers; but the Japanese give them food and wine, and surround them with everyday talk. The companionship is closer. We chatter much about immortality. We even think that in some other world the dead may meet the dead whom they have known in life. But the actual communion of the dead and living is for us a beautiful and inspiring metaphor rather than a concrete belief. Now the Japanese, although their religion is so much vaguer than ours, hardly question the survival of the ancestors in the close proximity of their children and grandchildren. The little funeral tablets are for them clothed with an invisible personality.

"This is your mother."

Asako felt influences floating around her. Her mind was in pain, straining to remember something which seemed to be not wholly forgotten.

Just at this moment Mrs. Fujinami arrived, carrying an old photograph album and a roll of silk. Her appearance was so opportune that anyone less innocent than Asako might have suspected that the scene had been rehearsed. In the hush and charm of that little chamber of the spirits, the face of the elder woman looked soft and sweet. She opened the volume in the middle, and pushed it in front of Asako.

She saw the photograph of a Japanese girl seated in a chair with a man standing at her side, with one hand resting on the chair back. Her father's photograph she recognised at once, the broad forehead, the deep eyes, the equiline nose, the high cheek bones, and the thin, angry, sarcastic lips; not a typically Japanese face, but a type recurrent throughout our over-educated world, cultured, desperate and stricken. Asako had only a common memory of her father; for his character had been moulded or warped by two powerful agencies, his intellect and his disease; and it was well for his daughter that she had escaped this dire inheritance.

Her Mother's Face

But never before had she seen her mother's face. Sometimes she had wondered who and what her mother had been; what she had thought of as her baby grew within her; and with what regrets she had exchanged her life for her child's. More often she had considered herself as a being without a mother, a fairy's child, brought into this world on a sunbeam or born from a flower.

Now she saw the face which had reflected pain and death for her. It was an impassive, doll-like and very young, pure oval in outline, but lacking in expression. The smallness of the mouth was the most characteristic feature, but it was not alive with smiles like her daughter's. It was pinched and constrained, with the lower lips drawn in.

The photograph was clearly a wedding souvenir. She wore the black kimono of a bride, and the multiple skirts. A kind of little pocket-book with silver charms dangling from it, an ancient marriage symbol, was thrust into the lower seam to leave its

FORBES' VIEWS ON FINANCE

By B. C. Forbes

Labor union leaders are to establish a bank in New York. Why not?

* * *

Each of us should do in this world what we think we are capable doing best. We think derive the fullest amount of satisfaction from our work and, at the same time can put most into the world.

Organized labor is already running a number of banks, including the Locomotive Engineers' Journal, which has been run financially successfully, the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers' Cooperative Bank of Detroit, which was founded November 1, 1920, with $450,000, and now has $17,000,000 invested.

If labor can run banks successfully in Cleveland and elsewhere, surely there ought to be room for a labor bank in the largest city in America, with its 700,000 unionists.

It is not unusual for special groups to organize a bank to take care of its banking requirements. We already have in New York, for example, the Chemical National Bank, Coal and Iron National Bank, Importers and Traders National Bank, Corn Exchange Bank, Industrial Bank, Mechanics and Metals National Bank, Farmers Loan and Trust Company, Textile Banking Company, and Bankers Trust Company.

Of course, all these institutions do business with people not in their special field, and a labor bank could doubtless do the same, although, naturally, catering particularly to those belonging to its own class. The proposed bank summarizes the services it will offer to workingmen thus:

Formation of credit unions and the fostering of co-operative movements.

Loans of a productive and constructive nature, such as the building of tenements.

Investigation and information on investments.

Acting as executor of wills, etc.

Transmission of money to relatives in foreign countries.

* * *

The man in mind for the presidency of labor's bank, which will be known as the Federation Trust Company, and plans to have branches in Brooklyn, the Bronx, Queens and Richmond, and institutions in other cities, is Walter F. McCuleb, who already has had experience in banking as vice president and general manager of labor's bank in Cleveland.

ADAMS EXPRESS.

To N. E. O., Congress street.—Rumor that Adams Express Company is to be liquidated is without basis. President William H. Barrett tells me: "As the Adams Express Company is no longer an operating company, its income will not be affected by the holiday business.

"We have two collateral bond issues outstanding, viz: twelve million and eight-five million, due 1948 and 1947, respectively, and therefore it is obvious that liquidation—if there were no other reasons—is not in contemplation."

COMMERCIAL SOLVENTS.

To T. P. E., Saugus—Commercial Solvents Corporation stock of which has lately been added to New York Stock Exchange list, uses a patented process for fermenting corn, which on distillation yields as its main products acetone and butyl alcohol, or butanol. The residue is used for cattle feed, or it can be used as fuel. Raw materials, aside from the patented bacteria, are coal and corn. Product is produced in ten days, and working capital is turned over in thirty days. Products are sold in tank car lots, mostly, to manufacturers of various articles. Eastman Kodak Company and Du Pont are among the largest customers. Class A stock pays $4 a year and sells around 43.

AMERICAN STEEL FOUNDRIES.

To G. D. F., Quincy—According to R. P. Lamont, vice-president of the American Steel Foundries, the company has the greatest amount of unfilled tonnage on its books in the history of the company, with the exception of the two war years, during which time it was operating on special work.

Mr. Lamont added that the company would earn during the year an amount in excess of its dividend requirements

CONTINENTAL CAN RUSHES TO NEW TOP

Price movements were irregular in the New York stock market, but bulls were aided by further stock and extra cash dividend declarations, bringing the month's total to around $1,200,000,000, and many special issues spurted.

Reynolds Tobacco B was up more than 4 points on its 22 1-2 per cent stock bonus declaration. Continental Can, in expectation of a stock "melon," soared to a new year's high. Years lows were made by American Cotton Oil, General Asphalt, Piggly-Wiggly and U. S. Rubber.

Contrasting movement featured afternoon dealings. Shipping stocks had a temporary sinking spell, despite the favorable committee report on ship subsidy bill.

Wentworth broke 4¾ and Mexican Petroleum, Republic Steel, American Sumatra Tobacco, Pullman, National Enamelling, Worthington Pump B, General American tank, Baldwin, Delaware & Hudson, Norfolk & Western and Wheeling & Lake Erie preferred also lost 1 to 2 points.

Subsequent buying of a large number of motor company issues, also various food stocks and Continental and American Can shares, and a rally of 3 points in Piggly-Wiggly Stores, caused the general market to stiffen again, although call money was marked up from 4* to 5½ per cent.

French Securities Up in Mixed Bond Market

There were few important changes in New York bond dealings, the main price tendency in which was upward.

Foreign securities were mixed. Paris-Lyons-Mediterranean 6s advancing 1 1-8 points and Denmark 8s advancing one. There were fractional gains in Mexican 4s and Framerican 7½s, while Soissons 8s yielded a point and Czecho-Slovakian 8s and Mexican 5s were slightly below Friday's closing quotations.

United States Government issues held steady.

Boston Notes

AHMEEK is not only turning out a yield well above normal, but has production at 50 per cent. of war peak.

ARCADIAN Consolidated will continue driving in present good milling ground on north side of 1,250-foot level of the Baltic shaft as long as values now being obtained persist.

SALMON Falls Manufacturing Company was not affected by strike which swept over New England in early months of year and is running fifty-four hours a week with some overtime work.

BUTTE & Superior backers now hope property will earn enough in final three months of this year to wipe out first nine months' deficit of $147,573.

QUINCY is still expected to keep up its 500,000-pounds production during the Winter.

MAXFLOWER-Old Colony continues in barren ground in its east crosscut. On the 1,400-foot level, however, interesting developments are looked for.

DAVID L. LOEW has been elected director of Loew's, Inc., in place of Harvey D. Gibson.

GREENE-CANANEA production is steadily increasing. Labor is cheap on this Mexican property as compared with higher costs in Lake region.

TRUSTEES of Real Estate Associates report for the year ended October 30 income of $168,305. Expenses, interest and depreciation totaled $99,250 and dividends of 1¾ per cent. amounted to $72,823, leaving a deficit for year of $3,835.

ISLAND Creek Coal output this month has been running ahead of previous months. Up to the 15th company produced around 96,000 tons, or at monthly rate of 192,000 tons. For seven months up to November 1 production had been running around 175,000 tons.

GENERAL Electric effects a saving of around 1½ per cent. a year by calling at 105 its $15,000,000 6 per cent. bonds due in 1940.

ST. ALBANS, Vt., will receive proposals until 9:30 a. m., November 28, for $15,000 4 per cent. coupon "water" bonds, dated June 15, 1921, maturing $5,000 June 15, 1929, and balance June 15, 1932.

HORNBLOWER & WEEKS—We still expect that a heavy reaction-ary tendency will characterize the market throughout the rest of month.

LILLIAN SHAW IS KEITH'S HEADLINER

Lillian Shaw, one of the most popular comediennes in vaudeville, tops the bill at Keith's this week and she is the real headliner of one of the most entertaining programs presented this season. Lillian is billed as the arch enemy of gloom and her full fifteen minutes of original comic numbers sure does drive the gloom away.

The dancing Cansine family from Spain present a new spectacle called "Fantasie Espanola," and it is one of the most remarkable numbers of its kind shown at this theatre. This act is full of terpsichorian ideas and fantastic steps. The members of the family, Elise, Eduardo, Angel and Jose, are natural born dancers and are so full of enthusiasm for their work that the audience is enthralled.

Another act of exceptional merit is a skit called the Gossipy Sex, in which Claire Whitney, former screen star, and Robert Emmet Keane, the Broadway comedian, appear. The other acts are Al Wohlman, the song writer, the Dixie Four, Arthur Hartley and Helen Patterson, Art Henry and Leah Moore, Harry Moore and Mang and Snyder.

FINE ARTS THEATRE—"The Beggar's Opera," an exceedingly spicy lyric comedy, which in reality is a delightful travesty on London society of 200 years ago, etters upon its third successful week at the Fine Arts Theatre. This piece is a gay, lively, vivacious play, set to music with very rich and ingratiating melodies. Its characters are most unusual, being almost wholly from the underworld. Its comedy is extremely funny. "The Beggar's Opera" is being presented by a company of English players and singers, and a few years ago, revived the piece in London. The leading roles are enacted by Arthur Wynn, Charles Magrath, Joseph Farrington, Alfred Heather, Hallen Mostyn, Lena Maitland, Dorianne Bawn, Celia Turrill, Julie deo and Nonny Lock.

LANCASTER THEATRE—Marion Davies' scintillating talents find in "Beauty's Worth" an ideal vehicle to please audiences of all descriptions. "Beauty's Worth" is at the Lancaster Theatre, where it will remain until Thursday. On the same bill is seen Jack Holt in "The Man Unconquerable." The change of program on Thursday will offer Dorothy Dalton in "The Woman Who Walked Alone" and Elaine Hammerstein in "Reckless Youth."

Coming Events

SELWYN THEATRE — Elmer Clifton's photoplay, "Down to the Sea in Ships," is announced as the attraction at the Selwyn, beginning next Monday night. There will be two showings daily.

BOSTON OPERA HOUSE—Cecils Sorel and her company from the Comedie Franchaise of Paris will open a week's engagement at the Boston Opera House next Monday. This distinguished artist will present a repertoire of modern and classic masterpieces.

REAL ESTATE HAPPENINGS

The property at Nos. 400-406 Massachusetts avenue and No. 2 Whittemore street, Arlington, comprising three two-apartment frame houses, a five-car garage and about 20,000 square feet of land, valued at $45,000, has been sold by Lucy H. Deering to Frank A. Connors, who has resold to Fairick Shea and Cornelius Sullivan of Dorchester, who bought for investment. William E. McCoy & Co. of 451-453 Old South Building, Boston, were the brokers.

MEREDITH CIRCLE, MILTON

Active work in the development of a large tract of land on Reedsdale road, Milton, has been begun by Thomas S. Richardson of Matapan square, Matapan. The property is centrally located, being near the Town Hall, the Public Library and Milton Academy. It was formerly known as the Meredith Estate and was for many years owned by A. A. Meredith, a scion of English aristocracy, who came to America, engaged in business here and established his residence in Milton. It is because of this that the development has been given the name of Meredith Circle.

The property consists of 12 acres of land, which has been divided into 28 house lots, ranging in size from 15,000 to 29,000 square feet. There is a frontage of 900 feet on Reedsdale road and the depth is about 750 feet. The lots are purposely laid out much larger than the customary house lot to provide ample room for garage, shrubbery and flowers, spacious yards and lawns.

Among the novel features planned by Mr. Richardson are the wide streets. These are to have a 26-foot roadway, 4-foot granolithic walks with 6-foot grass plots paralleling on each side, making a total street width of 46 feet. Another innovation will be two automobile turning circles, 66 feet in diameter, which will permit easy turning of all motor vehicles.

No expense will be spared in improving the property with flowers and plants. Many fine old trees on the property will be retained. Already Mr. Richardson reports one-third of the lots sold. The unprecedented demand for high-class lots in Milton augurs well for the early sale of the remaining lots.

What Is Going On?

Read and You Will Learn

Copyright, 1922, Star Co.

There are things going on just now other than the clamorous activities of men.

There is more news than murders, mobs and markets.

One event that is taking place, an event which large-hearted people have noted, is the migration of the birds.

Out in the country in the stillness of the night may be heard a great twitter overhead. The warblers are winging onward through the dusky sky.

To hear them is as if one heard something of the whispered beauty of the vast universe. Unseen to men, who are busy with their loves and hates, their talk and struggle, the gathered army is streaming south.

Tanagers, thrushes, vireos, orioles and most of the sparrows are on their way.

And one may hear the trill of the pine warblers journeying from Canada to the southern States.

Some of them fly low, others can be seen through telescopes against the face of the moon flying from a mile to two miles high.

What strange mind directs their course? What mysterious and invisible power leads them on?

And what hymn is that winged congregation singing?

Let every wind be hushed, that we may hear
The wondrous things they tell the world below.

Humbling the Black Man

His Championship Stays

Copyright, 1922, Star Co.

The French prize fighting commission has taken away the fighting rights of Siki, the black Senegalese savage that made himself champion and unpopular by beating Carpentier, the very handsome white gentleman.

The commission also seeks to take away Siki's championship, but it can't do THAT. The black man knocked out the white man, and that STANDS.

It is interesting to learn that in this country a man under contract to pay Siki a certain amount for fighting says he will break the contract now that the French commission bars Siki. It might amuse the black gentleman to find out, in United States courts, whether the decision of a boxing commission is superior to the general laws on the subjects of contracts.

Slow Freight Movement

The coming of the mighty Majestic to be docked in our huge Boston dockyard for repairs is a little pencil of light shining down through the gloomy clouds which have hung over our port situation these last few months. The single instance means but little. Yet it indicates what "might have been" and what under different circumstances might still be.

Apropos of this general situation another column in the same morning paper which gives a picture of the Majestic gives also an account of a meeting of western Massachusetts business men before a special Massachusetts railroad committee inquiring into the proposed consolidation of the New England roads. Mr. C. G. Chamberlain, traffic manager of the Ludlow Manufacturing Associates, addressed the committee. He said that his association had central offices in Boston and sent out annually more than 3,000 cars of freight. He declared that the service given by New England roads to that 3,000 cars of freight was "rank and rotten." He declared that it usually takes two weeks or more to ship a car from Ludlow to Lawrence or to Lowell or to Manchester or to any other New England city.

There is still living a very able old gentleman, now become somewhat of a crank on certain phases of the railroad question, who used to amuse us by asserting with all the solemnity which his ministerial looks made possible that Adam's ox team used to haul freight faster in the Garden of Eden than the average freight is hauled on an American railroad under private management. It used to provoke a smile and his audience used to think that he made the assertion to get the smile. But he was very earnest about it and was always willing to offer proof that at least a very large part of the American freight moved more slowly than Adam could have moved it on his ox team.

We have frequently called attention to other proof of this extraordinary assertion and the statement of the representative of the business house which shipped 3,000 cars a year is still more evidence of the amazing slowness with which our modern railroads under private management move their freight.

The Jury System

Speaking to the Boston Chamber of Commerce luncheon the other day, District Attorney O'Brien said that "unless stringent measures are taken at once, I fear that there will be a loss of faith in the jury system."

Mr. O'Brien need not worry. Whether stringent measures are immediately taken to reform the jury system or are never taken the jury system will continue with us so long as the men of the republic itself stand, and our faith will abide intimately with the most precious of our democratic institutions.

But this is not to say that there are not great errors and shocking errors in the present administration of the jury system. Nor is the greatest error the failure to take a complete cross-section of the community. If the interests of the men whom Mr. O'Brien was addressing were greatly and persistently challenged by the absence of men of their kind on the jury in proper proportion, a way of performing a burdensome duty would be quickly found.

But Mr. O'Brien's attack upon the professional juror and upon the present way of making up the jury list is absolutely sound. He will aid the State greatly in the administration of justice if he can work out a better system of making the jury an honest drawing by lot of all classes of the community.

Our Fault If Lonely

By Winifred Black

THE middle-aged woman is breaking her middle-aged heart.

She's neglecting her work and slighting her friends and forgetting her philosophy, and sometimes she even neglects her little boy.

Her own little boy who loves and believes in her and trusts her—all because the middle-aged man who has been paying attention to her is going on a long journey and he hasn't asked her to marry him and go with him.

Poor soul!

I'm sorry for her.

It's pretty hard for a middle-aged woman to give up a hope or even to change a plan.

A girl of 18 has a dozen strings to her bow.

If one partner leaves her, she can get a new one before the music starts up for the next dance, but the middle-aged woman—ah, the ballroom is beginning to be empty of men and she is so afraid she'll be a wallflower!

Now if she only knew it, a middle-aged wallflower can get a good deal of fun out of life if she will only make up her mind that she is a wallflower and not expect to be anything else.

It is not all fun and frolic and laughter over there in the debutante's corner, poor, wistful Mrs. Middle-Aged.

Lonesome? Of course, you're lonesome. Every human being is lonesome—sometimes.

But good common sense and a wholesome love of fun, what good company they are along the road, and what good times you can have with them—when Love sits pouting in the corner and Romance has got its feet wet and is beginning to sneeze!

Take your apron away from over your head, Mrs. Middle-Aged, dry your eyes, lock the door and go out in the kitchen and make a good bowl of soup or a nice batch of cookies and have something especially good ready for Little Son when he comes home from play. His joy will reward you.

See if it doesn't.

THE VOICE OF NEW ENGLAND

No Attention Paid to Anonymous Communications

Gordon Case

Editor Boston American:

The public thinks something should be done in the Gordon case. That girl is at the mercy of the doctors and the Jardine family. Why don't they give the girl a chance to tell her story or send her to an institution where she can get proper care?

EX-NURSE.

Real Southerner

Editor Boston American:

Please permit me to answer through your columns O. Pearl Harry, Chelsea, and say a few things for the real Southerner. There is no such a thing there as hatred for the negro, and the color line is drawn socially only. We do not believe in the negro marrying our white girls or boys, nor do we care to have the negro visit us socially. Where in the so-called North will an employer feed and care for the family of an employe the whole Winter long because the head of the house is out of work and funds? I know of many cases in the South where the negro head of a family calls on his employer in December of January and states to his employer, "Boss, I am broke, and the old woman has no flour or bacon at home." In cases like this Mr. Employer will take the man to the store and tell the storekeeper to see that he gets whatever he and his family may need. In cases like this the negro will be obliged to work and pay off his Winter bill during the following Summer.

The principal reason, as I understand it, for not allowing the races to mix socially is to protect the coming generations.

Not Responsible

Editor Boston American:

You have always stood up for justice and right, and I know that you will see that justice will be done in the Dorothy Gordon case. She should be removed at once and placed in the home of some loyal friend away from the influence of any of her relatives.

She is no longer responsible for what she says.

MRS. O. A. CARPPI.

THE HELPING HAND

Chance on a Farm

Editor Boston American:

I read the "Bunches of Muscle" editorial and letter from J. G. and J. S. in your columns. If the two young men are ambitious and willing to learn, I have a good place for them. We have a large farm, thirty cows and lots of timber. So they will not only learn farming but lumbering. I'll start them in on the easiest jobs and as they learn and become able to do a real day's work I'll pay them accordingly.

They'll have a clean, comfortable bed and boiledcorn meals with pleasant family relations. They'll be treated as one of the family. If they will take an interest in us and ours we will take an interest in them.

If they wish to know more particulars have them write

Country Home for Cat

Editor Boston American:

I want to find a home in the country for a maltese male cat who fell into a lime keg at a new theatre building and is now in the animal hospital, perfectly well, but in need of a out-door life and air to hasten the growth of hair on tail and legs.

MRS. F. R. B.

ED. NOTE — The address of such a woman will be sent.

Catholic Magazines

Editor Boston American:

If you will please send me the address of the invalid lady that would like some Catholic magazines I will be pleased to send her some.

I would like her address even if some one else sends her some, as the ones I have might be different.

MRS. S. A. M.

U. S. Artists in Paris Salon

PARIS, Nov. 21.—American exhibits at the Paris Autumn Salon are more numerous and perhaps more interesting than those of former years. There seems to be a definite departure from the cubist and "dada" traditions. The pictures are not puzzles this year. Landscapes and portraits have not been neglected, but nudes hold an important place.

Robert Hostater of Marysville, Cal., shows a striking nude called "The Woman With the Blue Stockings," remarkable for its strength and finely-shaped head. Another, by Robert Johnson, a mother and child, is attracting a good deal of favorable comment. "The Sleeping Woman," a nude by Arthur Franck of Philadelphia, gives an unusual idea of sleeping, but the body is thick and heavy, as in another of his studies, "The Woman With the Lemons," but one wonders what the lemons have to do with her.

Will Hollingsworth of Louisville, Ky., has a lovely series of water colors much in the style of Whistler. J. Barry Greene of New York and Eleanor Hay also exhibit some attractive little essays in coloring.

American landscapists include Kenneth Adams from Topeka, Kan., with a view of Cassis, and Bion Barnett of Jacksonville, with a Corsican scene. Elizabeth Dercum of Philadelphia has been painting the lovely River Loing and exhibits a view of picturesque Moret. Otis Dudley of New York has some charming Brittany scenes.

American artists are also to the fore in the still life and flower sections, with Bailey Foster, James Butler and P. H. Bruce.

They are more rare in the sculpture section, but the bust of Miss S——, by Jo Davidson, the well-known New York sculptor, is worth noticing. Cecil de Blaquiere Howard from Niagara has five delightful bronzes scattered here and there throughout the rooms.

"La Vierge a l'Offrande," the offering Virgin, an immense statue twenty feet in height, dominates the great staircase. It is the work of Emile Bourdelle, at the same time mystic and pagan. The Virgin, of beautiful face, is offering her child to humanity as a promise of consolation. When finished in stone, the government will decorate a great hall in France.

SEEN AND HEARD

COAL by doctor's prescription is a new one for Boston. His child, stricken with pneumonia a father told the doctor he was unable to get coal. The physician wrote a note to a coal company and the following day three tons were delivered.

Two persons in Somerville, perhaps, realize that JOHN A. AVERY, the head-master of their high school, is a singer of ability. Many times, at special assemblies in the school auditorium, MR. AVERY has rendered impromptu solos.

Good wine can be purchased in Germany for 6 cents a quart, according to PROFESSOR E. PROKOSCK of Bryn Mawr College, who spent his vacation in motor-cycling through that country. He says it costs only 10 to 15 cents to stay at a good hotel, that skilled mechanics' labor brings 5 cents an hour and that Germans ride 190 miles on railways for less than 1 cent. Looks like a good place for a vacation.

One of the traffic officers stationed in the financial district says that since March he has summoned into court over 1,000 automobiles owners for parking their cars in the streets of this district more than twenty minutes, and has obtained convictions in most cases. In the face of all these convictions, he is still on the job tagging from thirty to forty cars a day.

FRANK P. S. GLASSEY, former Boston newspaperman, now United States Vice-Consul at Helsingfors, Finland, writes that on a recent vacation tour of the Continent he had dinner in the best restaurant in Berlin and that the whole meal, including some old wine and the waiter's tip, set him back only 35 cents, figured in real coin.

Consumer waited ten days for coal from one dealer, cancelled his order and gave it to another dealer and in one hour after the order was placed the coal was in his bin.

MAJOR FRANK H. BRIGGS, High street merchant and president of the New England Association of the Amateur Athletic Union, was once a baseball fan. He owned five shares in the old Boston National League club stock which carried the privilege of seeing all the games at the South End grounds free. The "Triumvirs" bought him out and the privilege ceased. But the major paid his way for many years after that.

A rainbow appearing in Leominster the other morning means a long, hard, cold Winter, say weather sharps.

Get married and lose your job. That's the penalty inflicted on its traveling salesmen by a widely known packing concern. Authority for this statement is a young man who asked that his marriage intention be omitted from the papers.

GARRETT P. SERVISS ON SCIENCE QUESTIONS

By Garrett P. Serviss

"May I ask you to discuss Newton's 'third law of motion?' If when a man pushes a cart the cart reacts with an exactly equal push on the man, how then does the push of the man outweigh that of the cart and produce motion in the direction of the man's push?—Daily Reader, Arkadelphia, Ark."

THIS is one of the most famous of the hard-shelled nuts that students of physics have to crack, and few there be that really crack it. School text books are obscure on the subject and, remembering my own experience in college, I doubt whether teachers are not often equally, or even more, obscure.

Considered mathematically, the problem is easily solved, the difficulty being to explain it in ordinary terms. What seems about the clearest statement that I have seen is that of the English physicist, Watson—no relation to Sherlock Holmes' friend.

Watson uses the instance of a horse towing a canal boat, in which the elements of the problem are the same as in the case of the man pushing a cart, except that a pull is substituted for a push. The forward pull exerted by the horse on the tow-rope is exactly equal to the backward pull exerted by the tow-rope on the horse. How then can they move?

"What we must remember," says Watson, "is that, as far as their relative positions are concerned, the horse and the boat are at rest, and form a single body (or system), and the action and reaction between them, due to the tension on the rope, must be equal and opposite, for otherwise there would be relative motion, one with respect to the other. (And now comes the crucial point.)

"The horse obtains the necessary purchase to move both itself and at boat where its feet touch the ground. At these points the horse's hoofs exert a force which has a component in the backward direction, the corresponding reaction of the ground having a component in the forward direction; and it is this component which produces the motion of the horse and the boat."

Or, taking your own case of a man pushing a cart, look at it in this way: When the push by the man equals the resistance of the cart, the man's continued motion, due to the pressure of his feet on the ground, sets both man and cart in motion.

Or take Professor Franklin's illustration of a locomotive drawing a car. There is a forward pull on the car by the locomotive and a backward drag on the car by the rails, and these two forces exerted on the car are not equal when the speed of the car is changing, but are equal when the speed is not changing. At the start, the speed is changing, from zero to a positive quantity, and the pulling force overcomes the resistance; but once the car moves, if the pulling force does not increase there will be no change in speed and consequently no difference between the forward and backward pulls on the car.

"Has an electric light bulb, or a pressure tank, equal pressure on the outside with that of the inside?—R. J. H., Chicago."

No. The tank may have an inside pressure much greater than that which the atmosphere exerts upon it from outside, while the lamp bulb has almost a whole atmosphere less pressure on the inside than on the outside. The bulb is constructed of air to a very high degree, so that it has to depend, to save itself from being crushed inwards, upon the strength of its walls. The pressure of the atmosphere upon any body near the sea level is almost 15 pounds to the square inch of surface.

FISH MAN'S ANCESTOR, SAYS EXPLORER

So said Professor William Beebe, famous scientist and author, following his return from ten months of studying primitive life in the jungles of British Guiana as director of the Tropical Research Section of the New York Zoological Society.

Thus when an irritated person refers to a fellow-being as "a poor fish," he is biologically right. Judged by scientific and pisces-torial standards, man is that very thing.

Dr. Beebe, so far as is known, is the first scientist to see a fish walk.

He discovered how it rises on its fins and uses the fins as arms and legs. "Hence," said Dr. Beebe, "man's arms and legs were once fins and his ancestors were water animals.

"When the land minnow reaches an obstruction it makes a frantic, concentrated rush, jumps, and clings to the obstruction with its tail.

"It has an adhesive tail.

"Then it makes another jump, and so on until it reaches the point it is making for, generally a secluded spot under a leaf, where it can lie in wait for insects. I have known a land minnow to live for nine days out of water.

"The land minnow, figuratively speaking, lives in a backwater from prehistoric times. It is a relative of the four-eyed minnow of British Guiana, but the four-eyed minnow, in spite of its visual perspicacity, never worked out a scheme for leaving the water.

"The land minnow took the first step one bright day several million years ago and then became stuck. Its fins remained fins in spite of all it could do. Some other fish that have since disappeared, did a little better, and as a result we have man.

"Science has known that the land minnows existed, but didn't know how the little fish managed to put three or four hundred feet between it and the nearest patch of water. The supposition was that the fish wriggled or crawled.

Dr. Beebe detailed in a simple way the most amazing facts about life in the far away jungles, the last stamping grounds of animal life.

"Did you discover any new forms of animal life?" he was asked.

"Yes: on this trip we found about 150 forms, including insects, unknown to science. And these were discovered in an area that included only one-quarter of a square mile.

"Man knows little about the jungle; it is easy to find new animals and insects. The difficulty comes in naming them.

"But I am not so much interested in discovering new forms of life as in studying the ones already known. In that way I believe a greater contribution to scientific knowledge can be made."
